In the Battle of Thermopylae of 480 BC, an alliance of Greek city-states fought the invading Persian army in the mountain pass of Thermopylae. Vastly outnumbered, the Greeks held back the enemy in one of the most famous last stands of history. Persian King Xerxes lead an Army of well over 100,000 men to Greece and was confronted by 300 Spartans, 700 Thespians and other Slave soldiers. Xerxes waited many days for King Leonidas to surrender or withdraw. When the Greeks did not leave, Xerxes was left with no option and he moved forward. The battle lasted for about 3 days and after which all 300 Spartans were killed. The Spartan defeat would not have happened if not for a local shepherd, named Ephialtes, who defected to the Persians and informed Xerxes of a separate path through Thermopylae, which the Persians could use to outflank the Greeks. Cast includes Gerard Butler, Lena Headey, David Wenham, Dominic West, Vincent Regan, Michael Fassbender, Tom Wisdom, Andrew Pleavin, Andrew Tiernan, Rodrigo Santoro, Peter Mensah, Stephen Mchattie. Directed by Zack Snyder. This 2-disc special edition DVD version features widescreen presentation; Additional scenes of the traitorous hunchback and never-before-seen giant warriors; Frank Miller’s vision realized on film; “300 Spartans - fact or fiction?”, the shocking life of a Spartan revealed; “Who were the Spartans?”, how the actors based their characters based on Spartan customs; Webisodes: go on set with the cast and crew; commentary by director Zack Snyder, screenwriter Kurt Johnstad and director of photography Larry Fong; Language: English; Subtitles: English, French.

On September 15, 1963 a bomb tore through the basement of a black Baptist church in Birmingham, Alabama killing four young girls. The racially motivated crime took place at a time when the civil rights movement was burning with a new flame: the bombing could have doused the flame. Instead the bombing fuelled a nation's outrage and brought Birmingham to the forefront of America's concern. The bombings are revisited using archival film footage, home photographs, comments by surviving families, the original 1934 press book; Original production design drawings; English subtitles for the deaf and hearing impaired.

A documentary about mass-kililings which took place in 1965-66 throughout Indonesia. General Suharto's forces undertook a bloody purge of suspected communists in Indonesia which resulted in the deaths of an estimated 500,000 to 1,000,000 people. The Indonesian government repressed all memory of the killings for decades. The film features the testimonies of four individuals and their families from Central Java and Bali, who break their silence for the first time. The families had members killed or "disappeared" by soldiers and neighbors. The survivors reveal that they are still subjected to and cope with the continual harassment, surveillance, and discrimination by the State and their community members. Music by Dengue Fever. Directed by Robert Lemelson. In English, Indonesian, Balinese, Javanese, with English subtitles.

Lights, camera, Flynn – the sound era’s first action hero. Whether dueling pirates, outgunning outlaws or battling Nazis, Errol Flynn thrilled fans with his charisma and athleticism. But the excitement didn’t end when filming wrapped. Flynn’s off-screen adventures were as colorful as any presented at the local Bijou. Trace Flynn’s journey from his Tasmanian childhood to the heights of Hollywood celebrity. Along the way, he goldmines in New Guinea, sails the world, reports on wars, stands trial, goes broke, and chases (and catches) far too many beautiful women. Film clips, home movies and interviews that include commentary provided in 2004 by eight-time Flynn co-star Olivia de Havilland highlight this look at a real life that, often tragically, outshone the stories in the studio.

Cameroon is the only African country to have been colonized by three European powers. The filmmaker chronicles how the French destroyed traditional culture to absorb Cameroon into their imperial system. Thirty years after independence, Cameroon still buys most of its books in France. Language is shown to be a tool of liberation, but also domination. The French have been replaced by a dictatorial indigenous regime that plunders the land and silences the authentic expression of its people. The effect of the colonial violence of yesterday is shown to be the cause of the intolerable present to better understand how a country of well-structured, traditional societies could fail to succeed as a state. Doon School quintet Series - In this film ethnographic filmmaker David MacDougall focuses on the life of one student whom he discovers at the Doon School, in northern India. The film explores the thoughts and feelings of Abhishek, a 12-year-old from Nepal, during his first days and weeks as a Doon student. This intimate documentary is at once the story of the encounter between a filmmaker and his subject and a glimpse into the mind of a child at "the age of reason." This film is the fifth and final film in ethnographic filmmaker David MacDougall's long-term, five-part study of childhood and adolescence at the Doon School. The school is India's foremost boarding school for boys, and the series provides unique insights into the values and training of the Indian middle class in particular and postcolonial elites more generally. The story of Haitian national hero, journalist, and freedom fighter Jean Dominique. Dominique was the owner and operator of Haiti's oldest and only free radio station. His outspoken dissent of the country's various repressive governments forced him to live in exile in New York for much of the 1980's and early 1990's. American director Jonathan Demme first met him in 1986 and filmed interviews with him several times in New York. Jean Dominique was assassinated in April of 2000, his shocking and still unsolved killing, was the impetus to assemble the more than a decades worth of material into a celebration of the man's legacy. A document of the neighborhood revelry of New Orleans, where 175 parade permits are issued a year. Much of the film focuses on the African-American Indian tribes, whose annual Mardi Gras and other parades pay homage to the Louisiana Indians who harbored escaped slaves. African, French, Spanish, and Caribbean elements are blended in the tribes’ ritualized costumes, songs, dances, verbal sparring, boasting, and humor. The community is bound together by this created ritual and celebration. The film ignores the famous Mardi Gras of the elite and the French and Spanish influence. The film was produced and directed by Les Blank. This DVD version features chapter search.

"This video reflects my interest in examining cultural institutions. In "The Amarillo News Tapes," we were interested in observing and dissecting what makes news in a small, Midwestern television market. The video shows the three of us in our respective roles as anchor, weatherman, and sportscaster, interacting with the real Pro News Team on the set. In such episodes as: 'Opening Routine,' ' Liberal Fire,' and 'Two Stories,' we attempted to draw attention to the oddities of language and theater that are a part of television news. Although these sections are humorous, our purpose was purely to parody the news for its own sake but to examine its style and ritual, which is as much about fiction as it is about fact."–Doug Hall Video by Doug Hall, Chip Lord and Jody Proctor. The film follows Amin Aghaie a postgraduate music student studying at the Kiev Conservatory. He is a talented violinist who is obsessed with the idea of preserving the folk music of the ancient Qashqai tribes of southern Iran. The once nomadic pastoralist peoples’ culture is eroding into near-obsolescence. As the older musicians die off, the music is disappearing. Amin travels modern Iran recording street musicians everywhere he encounters them obsessively preserving a musical heritage that is inherently dependent on oral tradition. Amin is described as “a cultural soldier of sorts as he attempts to capture the practices of the fast dying-art.” His efforts to document the music are half the story, the other part is Amin himself. His family has made great sacrifices to afford to send him to Kiev. He is on verge of financial crisis and while he passionately pursues preserving the ancient music, his own life is losing vitality. His is a forlorn, threadbare existence forming a melancholy counterpoint to the haunting music he is seeking out. He is forced to sell his violins to continue his studies and field research. Featuring Amin Aghaie. Directed by Shahin Parhami. In Farsi and other languages, with English subtitles.

It was Veit Harlan, the protege of Joseph Goebbels and the director of the anti-Semitic propaganda film 'Jew Suess,' who dared to do a film about a controversial taboo in 1957: the German penal code’s Paragraph 175 which sentenced German homosexual men to jail terms for ‘unnatural vice between men.’ 'Anders als du und ich' (Different from You and Me) is not only a film about homosexuality, it also deals with the rebellion of young people against the restorative Germany after the Second World War and with the problems of a mother who broke the law to ‘do the right thing.’ In the tale, Klaus is a young man in post-war Berlin. He is drawn to his friend Manfred and, under the encouragement of their acquaintance, Dr. Winkler, explores the underground world of gay clubs and electronic music. His family begins to learn of his other life and do everything they can to set him straight: his mother pays her maid to sleep with Klaus, and his father sues Dr. Winkler. COLOR 97 MIN FIRST RUN 2005
Gendun Choepel is a legendary figure in Tibet, he was a promising young monk, believed to be the reincarnation of a famous Buddhist lama, who rejected monastic life and became a fierce critic of his country's religious conservatism, cultural isolationism, and reactionary government. After leaving the monastery in 1934 he traveled throughout Tibet and India in order to gain a better understanding of his country's true political history. His critical writings of the Tibetan government resulted in his imprisonment for three years as a political subversive.

Choepel is revered in modern day Chinese-occupied Tibet and is an influential symbol of hope for those seeking reform in a free Tibet. The film contains rare archival footage; readings from his works; examples of his paintings and sketches; interviews with Tibetan travelers, a travel companion, a British diplomat, Choepel's widow; and contemporary visits to many of the placesChoepel traveled. Narrated by Loten Namlung, Thomas Sarbacher, Phil Hayes. A film by Luc Schaedler.

ANPO refers to the U.S.-Japan Mutual Security Treaty, which permits the continued presence of numerous U.S. military bases in Japan. In 1960, public resentment against the military presence erupted in massive popular demonstrations that were crushed by Japan’s C.I.A.-backed Prime Minister Kishi. A wide range of Japanese artists depicted this resistance with a rich archive of art and films, including many large-scale paintings long hidden from public view. Contemporary artists continue to draw on their predecessors legacy, depicting problems generated by the bases. Shot in high definition, the film reveals the extraordinary passion behind this buried treasure trove of paintings, photographs, anime, and documentary and narrative films. A young and vibrant president shot dead on the streets of a major American city - the fourth presidential assassination in the country's history. The assassination of President John F. Kennedy was also the first time that U.S. television networks went to 24-hour coverage of a news story. ABC News takes you back to November 22, 1963. Many televisions on the east coast were tuned in to "Father Knows Best" when the first special news bulletin broke in with a report that the President had been shot. Watch as the information that is familiar to us now was reported for the first time - the first eyewitness reports and the first time we learn the shots were fired from the Texas School Book Depository. You also see police display the rifle Lee Harvey Oswald used and the first interview with Abraham Zapruder, the bystander who shot the now famous video of the motorcade and assassination, but whose significance was not fully appreciated at the time.

COLOR 79 MIN THIRD WORLD 2012
African American poet, feminist, lesbian, activist Audre Lorde's incisive writings and speeches defined and inspired women of color, feminists, and LGBT social justice movements in the United States throughout the 1970's and 80's. The Berlin years constitute the time in her life when she helped ignite the Afro-German Movement and made lasting contributions to the German political and cultural scene before and after the fall of the Berlin Wall and the German reunification. The film explores the importance of Lorde's legacy, her refusal to abandon the Germans – who, at that time, had no name or space for themselves – to make themselves visible within a culture that until then had kept them isolated and silent. Lorde also challenged white German women to acknowledge their white privilege. Director Dagmar Schlutz uses previously unreleased audiovisual material from his personal archive showing Lorde on and off stage and testimony from Lorde's colleagues, students, and friends to document her lasting legacy in Germany. Written and directed by Dagmar Schlutz. This DVD version features Audre in Berlin; Audre reading her poems; Audre on her work; Deleted scenes; Trailer; Interview with the director; Music clip; Languages: English and German; Subtitles: English, Spanish, German, and French.

Baaria : (DVD) 15231,ID

Baaria is Sicilian slang for Bagheria, a small Sicilian village in the province of Palermo where writer and director Giuseppe Tornatore was born. This film is a grand-scale portrait of life and love over several decades from the 1920s to the 1980s in Bagheria, following the life journey of Peppino Torrenuova from his upbringing as a high-spirited cowherds son in the 30s to his tichingous and comy political career. The Torrenuovas are a family of peasant shepherds who have lived and worked in Bagheria through many generations. In the years before the rise of Mussolini, the family often found themselves working for Don Giacinto, a local tycoon who often used his power and position to take advantage of others. Young Peppino stainless a profound injustice, the Treaty Don Giacinto treats his elders, and as the years pass the young man becomes a passionate advocate for social change. Once he grows to be a man, Peppino falls in love with beautiful Mannina and they get married, starting a family of their own over the objections of Mannia’s parents, who believe she can do better. As Peppino throws in his lot with the local Communist party and works to make Life better for his fellow peasants, we see a number of important historical events through his eyes and watch the fortunes of his town and his family rise and fall. Music by Ennio Morricone. Screenplay by Maurizio Sabatini. Written and directed by Giuseppe Tornatore. The history of the revolutionary twentieth-century dance troupe known as the Ballets Russes. The troupe was started by a group of Russian refugees who had never danced in Russia. A brief review of the Diaghilev years, which began in turn-of-the-century Paris, leads into the period from 1929 until its demise in 1962, the era of the company's greatest success when the group evolved into two rival dance troupes who fought the infamous "ballet battles" that consumed London society before World War II, at the end rising costs, rocketing egos, outside competition, and internal mismanagement ultimately caused the revered company to dissolve. The film features rare archival footage and anecdotal interviews with many of the company's surviving glamorous stars, most of them in their 80's. The Ballet Russes was a merger of Russian, American, European, and Latin American dancers, choreographers, composers, and designers that transformed the face of ballet for generations to come. "Balseros" is a slang term for Cuban rafters. During the chaotic summer of 1994 as United States President Bill Clinton and Cuban President Fidel Castro argued over the closing of Cuba's coast, nearly 50,000 "balseros" set out from Cuba towards Florida on vessels made of wood, nails, and tar. A television reporting team filmed and tracked the refugees over 15 days as most of the rafters were picked up by U.S. Coast Guards. This film presents the accounts of seven Cuban refugees and their families. These Cubans risked their lives and then were detained for more than a year before finally being allowed onto American soil. The rafters' odyssey is followed for seven years, weaving together footage on the sea with footage of their families' reactions, and the refugees experiences as immigrants in the United States. Punk before punk existed, three African American teenage brothers formed a band in the early 1970s in their spare bedroom. Equal parts rockumentary and family love story, this film chronicles the journey of what happened almost three decades later, when a dusty 1974 demo tape made its way out of the attic and found an audience several generations younger. Death is now being credited as the first black punk band, and are finally receiving their long overdue recognition as true rock pioneers. Directed by Jeff Howlett and Mark Covino. The match between professional tennis star Billie Jean King and tennis hustler, chauvinistic showman Bobby Riggs took place in front of 30,000 spectators in the Houston Astrodome and a global television audience of 50 million. The match pitted male chauvinism versus women's liberation and proved a welcome distraction from the Vietnam war and the shame of the Watergate Scandal. This documentary combines match footage with contemporary interviews with tennis players past and present, key contributors and journalists, to relive how the match placed tennis on the world center court and changed sport forever. Featuring Billie Jean King, Chris Evert, Maria Sharapova, Venus Williams, Serena Williams, Caroline Wozniacki, Virginia Wade. Written and directed by James Erskine and Zara Hayes.

The Yakuza Papers Series - The violent, documentary-style film tells the story the gangland wars that lasted nearly twenty-five years in postwar Japan. The story revolves around Shozo Hirono, an ex-soldier, and his buddies who are drawn into gangster faction wars, assassination attempts, drug lord double-crosses and feuds. It is the opener and anchor of Kinji Fukasaku's five-film series about the yakuza wars that broke out in Hiroshima the year after the A-bomb. The message of the film is the futility of violence, crime and warring, with broader implications hinted in the title being shown over a backdrop of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima. The film gained enormous commercial success in Japan and spawned follow-up movies and impacted action movie making in the United States. Adapted from a series of newspaper articles by Koichi Iiboshi, a journalist and former yakuza. Cast includes Bunta Sugawara, Hiroki Matsukata, Kunie Tanaka, Eiko Nakamura and Tsurenokho Watase. Screenplay by Kazuo Kasahara. Directed by Kinji Fukasaku. This widescreen edition features 'The Yakuza Wars of Hiroshima'; a pull-out 'Viewer's Guide' to yakuza characters, gang affiliations, deaths, battles, ascensions, and incarcerations found in 'The Yakuza Papers series'; Original theatrical trailers and director filmography; Language: Japanese; Subtitles: English; Captioned for the deaf and hard of hearing.

In the summer of 1968, the ABC network was dead last in the ratings. Looking to produce something people would want to watch, the network hired two towering public intellectuals to debate each other during the Democratic and Republican national conventions. William F. Buckley Jr. was a leading light of the new conservative movement. A Democrat and cousin to Jackie Onassis, Gore Vidal was a leftist novelist and polemicist. Armed with deep-seated distrust and enmity, Vidal and Buckley believed each other’s political ideologies were dangerous for America. Like both of the two puppet presidents, they exchanged insults, their explosive exchange devolving into vitriolic name-calling, Live and unscripted a new era in public discourse was born. Experimental Half Hour Series - Experimental Half-hour is a television show that started in August of 2010 in Portland, Oregon as a platform to engage and broadcast local and international filmmakers, musicans, writers, dancers, and comedians. The half-hour episodes provide a record of the contemporary performing arts and video culture. Much of the work featured is the result of the collaborative efforts of filmmakers, musicians, and writers. The projects and programs are the result of the collaboration between volunteers and local businesses. The work is a result of the committee's desire to develop a new format for presenting contemporary performance and to offer a new point of view on the world. Experimental Half-hour challenges the idea of television and creates a platform for artist to channel their ideas that are sometimes hard to do on its own. This bi-weekly television show of experimental music and performance art is now based in Los Angeles, California. This compilation includes: Merv; Pulse Electronics; Lot Lizards; Dangerous Liaisons; Prince of Dies IV; Jason Unck; Lets Paint TV; Miracles Club; Dream It Never Ends. A common theme in religious and cultural and political discourse is the battle between “good versus evil.” The “good and evil” rhetoric has become a common theme in the entertainment and news mediums, the lines between the two often blurred; and freely used by politicians as a strategy to win approval for their policies. In entertainment the struggle between “good versus evil” is often resolved through violence. This documentary looks at the current political climate as government policies call for the use of violent military action to fight “evil,” and news and entertainment validate the actions as heroic and patriotic. Particular concern is given to the message being sent to children who are exposed to the rhetoric first in their entertainment options and then the school rhetoric seeps into their reality. Through interviews with media scholars, child psychologists, teachers, educators, and the children themselves; children have been taught to dehumanize the enemy, justify their killing, and treat suffering of innocent civilians as necessary sacrifice. During the mid-90s a deadly East Coast vs. West Coast rap rivalry erupted, fought between the New York-based camp of Sean "Puffy" Combs and his Bad Boy label, home to Brooklyn's Biggie Smalls (a.k.a. Notorious B.I.G., legally Christopher Wallace), and West Coast riders at Marin "Suge" Knight's Death Row records, home to Tupac Shakur. The feud quickly escalated from CD disses to real-life crime, and murder. On Sept. 7, 1996, Tupac Shakur, 25, was gunned down gangland-style at a traffic light in Las Vegas. On March 9, 1997, Wallace, 24, was sprayed with bullets while sitting in an SUV outside a Los Angeles music industry party. Neither crime has been solved; nobody has ever been arrested in connection with the killings. Documentary Nick Broomfield plunges fearlessly into this milieu, believing that more is there than meets the eye. Special features: Directors commentary [optional audio feature]; Additional scenes (41 min.); Interview with Nick Broomfield (14 min.); Additional information [text feature]; Discographies and filmography [text feature]; Christopher Wallace Memorial Foundation [text feature]. Coffee is the second most actively traded commodity in the world. While a coffee drink can sell for more than $3 to consumers, a coffee farmer will receive only three cents. The majority of the money made from coffee goes to the middleman, especially the four giant conglomerates which control the coffee market. The path of the coffee consumed by millions each day is followed from the farmers who grow the beans to show the unjust conditions under which the popular drink is produced. The efforts of the Oromic Coffee Farmers Cooperative Union in Southern Ethiopia to secure a living wage for the 70,000 Ethiopian coffee farmers are detailed. The film exposes the international commodities markets which are rigged against the nations of the global South and shows how ordinary consumers can pressure corporations to influence trade, environmental, and human rights policy for a more equitable relationship between the global North and South. Directed by Marc Francis and Nick Nolan. This DVD version features closed captioning for the deaf and hearing impaired.

The Criterion Collection Series - Majesty gives way to mystery, and marks a harrowing descent into madness, when a young British nun is ordered to establish a convent in the remote and harsh Himalayan mountains. Sister Clodagh is a serious young novice assigned to lead a crucial mission, with the reluctant recommendation of her Mother Superior. Together with a disparate group of nuns, Sister Clodagh will face strange peoples and customs, a harsh and unforgiving climate and a wrenching struggle with her own past that will prove the ultimate test of her devotion and faith. Their physical environment - extreme temperature, illness and a young Indian prince's perfume (Black Narcissus) - leads to psychological disturbance coupled with emotional weakness. Jealousy, sexual repression and hysteria all play their part in a climax which ripped through the British stiff upper lip attitude of the time. Adapted from the novel by Rumer Godden. Hip-Hop culture has grown over the last thirty years to be embraced by young people worldwide and is a global youth culture. This documentary looks at the popularity of Hip-Hop among Americas white youth. The film explores racial identity in U.S. society, asking whether white identification is rooted in admiration and a desire to transcend race or if it is merely a new chapter in the long continuum of stereotyping, mimicry and cultural appropriation; Asking if white Americas embrace of Hip-Hop is a reflection of a new face of racial understanding or does it reinforce an ugly history. The film draws parallels between the white hip-hop fan and previous incarnations of white appropriation from blackface performer Al Jolson to mainstream artists like Elvis Presley, the Rolling Stones and Eminem. Portraits of white Hip-Hop artists and fans are interleaved with commentary by African American cultural critics including Amiri Baraka, Nelson George, Greg Tate, Paul Mooney, Chuck D, Russell Simmons, M1 of Dead Prez, DJ Kool Herc. A follow-up to the film 'Pusher.' Story of a young couple living on the edges of society. Leo and Louise are in love and share a flat; Leo likes to go drinking with his buddies and watch action movies on the VCR, while Louise prefers quiet nights at home. Louise's brother Louis is a racist thug who imagines himself an underworld kingpin. Lenny is a friend of Leo's who loves movies but is painfully shy around women; when he finally works up the nerve to ask Lea, a waitress at an all-night diner, for a date, a mix-up finds the two seeing the same film but at different theaters. While Leo seems better adjusted with his friends, that begins to change when Louise informs him that she's going to have a baby. Leo doesn't react well to the news: he becomes remote and begins to turn violent, as a long-held self-loathing finally begins to rise to the surface. After a final brawl at Leo's hands, Louise loses her baby, forcing her brother to exact dire revenge. Cast includes Kim Bodnia, Mads Mikkelsen, Zlatko Buric, Liv Corfiex, Levinjo Jense. A personal history of Traudl Junge one of Adolf Hitler’s private secretaries. In 1942, at the age of 22, Junge was chosen from a clerical pool to fill the position of personal secretary to Hitler. Her experiences with the man were far different than his bombastic persona displayed during speeches. She viewed the man as a surrogate father, private and polite, and was convinced she was operating in the center of information. In fact, she was shielded from the knowledge of the atrocities being committed by the Nazi regime. In the end she witnessed the destruction of the Third Reich and Hitler’s spiral into madness; she worked up to the final chaotic days in the bunker. This film was completed just months before Junge’s death and reveals her story which she had seldom spoken for nearly sixty years. Interview by Andre Heller. The book received notoriety from 1978-1982 during the rise of Reaganian republicanism and the emergence of punk rock. In Parnes’ interpretation, each video-chapter presents a typical scene in the life of Janie bracketed by U.S. news events from the time period in which the book was written. These events saturate the character’s daily experience, informing her adolescent, nihilistic worldview and her desire to destroy the world around her. Inspired by a visit to the Borobudor ship temple in Indonesia and a bas-relief carving of an ancient ship he saw there, former British Royal Naval officer Philip Beale commissioned Indonesian craftsmen to build a replica of the 8th century ship and sail from Indonesia to the west coast of Africa. His visit to the temple was in 1982, Beale's plan was to build an exact replica of the ship.
and sail it from Indonesia to Africa, attempting to prove it was possible for the ancient Indonesian migration to have reached as far as West Africa via the Cape of Good Hope. In 2003/2004 his dream became a reality and his team of Indonesian and international adventurers assembled for one of the longest “kon tiki” type voyages ever taken. The film follows the Borobudur ship through the Maldives, Seychelles, and Madagascar and the dramatic attempt to sail around the Cape of Good Hope.

TimeWatch Series - Brazil was the largest participant in the slave trade, with forty percent of all slaves that survived the Atlantic crossing bound for Brazil, compared to the four percent sent to the United States. At one time half the population of Brazil was slaves. The country was also the last to officially abolish slavery in 1888. This British documentary details the brutality of the slave traders and slave owners, and the hardship of plantation life. The Portuguese colony of Angola acted as a supply source of Africans to Brazil; it was cheaper to work a slave to death, than to treat them reasonably. The production charts Brazil’s history of slavery using original texts, letters, accounts, and decrees, with commentary by historians, anthropologists and others recount the effect of centuries of slavery on Brazil today. Brinkmanns Zorn : (DVD-PAL) 15599.ID
COLOR 341 MIN NEUE VISIO 2006
Biographical drama and film collage from on the last years of Rolf Dieter Brinkmann, the celebrated and iconoclastic German poet who brought the rebellious attitude of the Beat Movement to Europe in the early Sixties and died at the age of 35. Having no use for the sentimental poetry and burdens of moral responsibility that permeated post-war German, Brinkmann’s verse depicted contemporary life with a bold immediacy which also informed his work in film, photography, visual art and audio collage. Brinkmann’s life outside of the public eye was every bit as turbulent as his public image, though in different ways: he had a stormy relationship with his wife, and their son was severely handicapped. Based on a large amount of Brinkmann’s non-published audiovisual material. Contains: ’1967-1970 Die Super-8 Filme’ (88 min) – ’1971-1973 Arbeitsbucher und Collagen: ’1971 ’Longkamp Tagebuch’ (69 min) & 1972-73 ‘Schnitte Collagen’ (79 min) – ’1975-75 Die Tonbander’ (105 min). The Bro code: how contemporary culture creates sexist men : (DVD) 18378.ID
COLOR 58 MIN MEDIA EDUC 2011
Filmmaker Thomas Keith takes aim at the forces in male culture that condition boys and men to dehumanize and disrespect women. Keith breaks down a range of contemporary media forms, zeroes in on movies and music videos that glamorize womanizing, pornography that trades in the brutalization of women, comedians who make fun of sexual assault, and a groundswell of men’s magazines and cable TV shows that revel in old-school myths of American manhood. Even as epidemic levels of men’s violence against women persist in the real world, the message Keith uncovers in virtually every corner of our entertainment culture is clear: It’s not only normal – but cool – for boys and men to control and humiliate women. Arguing that there’s nothing normal, natural, or inevitable about this mentality, The Bro Code challenges young people, young men and women alike, to step up and fight back against the idea that being a real man means being sexist. With Thomas Keith; interviewees: Douglas Rushkoff, Michael Leahy, Rory Reid, Robert Jensen, Michael Kimmel, Shirat Tarrant, Gilbert Pote, Neal King, Richard Tofield, Gonzalo Rucobo, J.W. Wiley. COLOR 81 MIN SAWHORSE P 2004

A hard hitting mystery that depicts the horrors of human trafficking of sex slaves in the Balkans and the gangs of ruthless killers, who operate the flesh-for-heroin trade. Young women are lured to Bucharest with the promise of jobs as dancers and models. Instead the women become the property of gangsters, who trade them for heroin, strip the women of their passports, and ship them to Turkey for a life of prostitution. A noble group of concerned people work to untangle a web of corruption and expose the gangs behind the slave trade. The film is a drama and not a documentary; still the filmmakers have made the film with the intention of exposing the sex slave trade that runs rampant in countries in the former Soviet Union. Cast includes Vera Marianchik, Roland Muldoon, Luchia Pogor, Chuck Portz. Screenplay by Peter Eichstaedt and C.R. Portz. Directed by C.R. Portz. This DVD version features chapter search; Trailer.

An examination of the transformation of classrooms, hallways, cafeterias, and textbooks into advertising vehicles. Education is short-changed and democracy is at risk when schools become marketplaces and commercialism spills into the classroom. The lucrative youth market is a favorite target for corporations advertising their products, and schools represent a captive audience of millions of young people. School systems face dwindling federal, state, and local funding. School administrators are vulnerable to the advertiser's pitch and have allowed a great deal of in-school advertising already and are pressured to accept increasingly more. Numerous examples of the phenomenon are given and teachers, students, parents, and activists are interviewed. Written by Loretta Alper. Narrated by Alvin F. Poussaint. Performances include Tuk band music, santeria, rumba, tumba, trancia, simadan, cebi celebration, children’s ring game, jing ping, rara, maroon communal song, jonkonnu, rastafarian song, Mento band music, calypso/soca, and steelband music. The Smithsonian/Folkways Recordings sought out examples of the musical traditions in the Americas performed in home communities rather than at folk festivals and unusual events. Preference was given to rural and traditional genres that are rarely heard, yet have often had a strong impact on national and international popular music styles. The footage was licensed from existing films and professional videotapes of musical and dance performances. The performances are presented without narration for the greatest musical impact. Set during the time of the Second Sino-Japanese War, "Caterpillar" tells the story of a Japanese soldier who returns home horrifically mutilated. Lieutenant Kurokawa is literally nothing but a human torso: he has lost both his arms and legs, and with burns covering half his face, he is also unable to speak. His wife, Shigeko, is given the grueling task of looking after him, which, in addition to feeding and washing him, includes the job of satisfying his sexual desires—impulses that remain as strong as ever in spite of his disabled condition. Taught to be dutiful and to do her part for her country, Shigeko bears her burden—but as she realizes that her husband’s life lies entirely in her hands, she begins to question the role she has accepted. The cast includes Shinobu Terajima and Shima Ohnishi. Directed by Koji Wakamatsu. Language: Japanese; Subtitles: English.

Chaplin at Keystone Charles Chaplin came to Mack Sennett's Keystone Studios late in 1913 as a little-known British vaudevillian, and after a year, had established his Tramp character, learned to write and direct his films, and also achieved public recognition as a star comedian. Although Keystone did not publicize its performers by name, standees of Chaplin's likeness outside theatres sufficed to attract audiences. Some of the films, especially 'Tillie's Punctured Romance,' remained in theatrical distribution for decades. The fact that all but one of the Keystone Classics exist due to the star's enormous subsequent popularity. Most of the original Keystone negatives, however, were simply printed away.
and the survival of all but a few of these films depends upon a very few original prints, a larger number of reissue prints, and some duped prints from later years. With the support of Association Chaplin (Paris), 35mm full aperture, early-generation materials were gathered over an eight year search on almost all the films from archives and collectors around the world, and were painstakingly pieced together and restored by the British Film Institute National Archive, the Cineteca di Bologna and its laboratory, Limanovta, and Lobster Films in Paris. Most are now clear, sharp and rock-steady, although some reveal that their source prints are well-used and a handful survive only in 16mm. While admitting these limitations, one can now understand Chaplin's meteoric rise, for it is possible for the first time in generations to see clearly what clever and imaginative films he made at Keystone, and observational silent films in Paris.

A documentary film which follows the lives of people brought up in the Kibbutzim in 1920s and 30s Israel, a social experiment to create a new and improved human. In this young idealist society, tradition and family were replaced by the collective, the individual’s will was subjugated to the common good and everyone was equal. The film uses footage from dozens of amateur films and rare footage shot between 1930 and 1970 to create a very personal and a very public description of the era. Written and directed by Ron Tal. This DVD version features extra rare archive materials; In Hebrew, with English subtitles.

An expose into the harsh world of sweatshop workers in China. The film was shot clandestinely and provides a deep access account of how clothes produced in China are actually made. The documentary follows a pair of denim jeans from birth to sale and links the power of the U.S. consumer market to the daily lives of Chinese factory workers. Workers at a blue-jean factory are already working in a harsh environment, when the factory owner agrees to a deal with a Western client and forces his teenage workers to work around the clock to meet production demands. The film is a rare human glimpse at China's rapid transformation into a free market society. A film by Micha X. Peled.

The film begins with this exposition, “the story you are about to see is based on the true events that took place in North Vietnam. In 1952-1954, unseen by the outside world, Ho Chi Minh’s communists imposed a reign of terror throughout the countryside to eliminate the opposition. This led to the massive exodus of one million refugees to the Republic of South Vietnam. All actors and extras in the film are actual refugees, portraying their own tragic story. In recent years, after the fall of Saigon, more than one million boat people in search of freedom have continued to flee Vietnam. Nearly half have died at sea. Their desperate journeys confirm the tyranny that still exists under communist rule, and the urgent need for the people of the free world to learn from their experience.” The film was originally made in Vietnam and released before 1975. The American Experience Series - Hernandez v. Texas is a landmark civil rights case that emerged from a bar fight death in a small Texas town in 1951 to go all the way to the Supreme court challenging Jim Crow-style discrimination against Mexican Americans. An underdog band of Mexican American lawyers took the case all the way to the Supreme Court using a daring legal strategy they argued that Mexican Americans were "a class apart" and did not fit neatly into a legal structure that recognized only blacks and whites. It is the landmark civil rights case that changed the lives and legal standing of tens of millions of Americans. Written by Carlos Sandoval. Directed by Carlos Sandoval and Peter Miller. An examination of the representation of working class people on television. The narrow representation of working class people as either clowns or social deviants has been prevalent since the very beginnings of television's portrayal of today's sitcoms, reality shows, police dramas, and daytime talk shows. Based on Pepi Leistyna's book "Class Dismissed," the program demonstrates the patterns inherent in TV's disturbing depiction of working class people and explores the ways in which race, gender, and sexuality intersect with class, offering a more complex reading of television's often one-dimensional representations. Links are made between the portrayal of the working class with negative cultural attitudes and public policies that directly affect the lives of working class people. Media analysts and cultural historians interviewed and featured include Stanley Aronowitz, Barbara Ehrenreich, Herman Gray, Robin Kelley, Pepi Leistyna, Michael Zweig, Arlene Davila, Susan Douglas, Bambi Haggins, Lisa Henderson, and Andrea Press. Narrated by Ed Asner. Written by Loretta Alper and Pepi Leistyna. Directed by Loretta Alper.

The College Track : America's Sorting Maching Series - Part one of a three part series on educational tracking in public schools and the unintended consequences of the educational "sorting machine" that mold a child's academic future. The series highlights the barriers to college faced by many students and showcases efforts of public schools and communities that are succeeding in dismantling those barriers. This episode highlights two schools' initiatives for reevaluating the academic structure of their school. A suburban school eliminates academic tiers and creates an integrated learning structure. An urban high school utilizes small class sizes and intimate learning environments to foster students' academic potential as advocated by Andre Braugher. This DVD version features on-demand English subtitles. This series includes an Educator's Guide and a Planning Guide that are on file at the Instructional Media Library in Powell Library room 46.

Promoted in its time as a celebration (or at least a fully informed study) of foreign ethnicities and customs, the 1900 World's Fair is promoted in its time as a celebration (or at least a fully informed study) of foreign ethnicities and customs, the 1900 World's Fair is recognized today as a spectacle of Eurocentric myopia. This program lays bare that conceit as it interweaves archival photographs, film clips, and posters from the Fair with commentary from renowned art historians. Offerings from museum collections across the world, including radically decontextualized Dahome and Dogon carvings and images from Palestinian refugee camps, are also featured. The result is a profound look at the ways in which Western prejudice, ethnography, and art consumption have counteracted authentic intercultural dialogue. School: The Story of American Public Education Series - In the aftermath of the American Revolution forward thinking patriots launched a passionate crusade to create a common system of tax-supported schools. The paramount goal for such leaders as Thomas Jefferson was to create a united nation out of the thirteen disparate colonies. The noble experiment begun by Jefferson and continued by Noah Webster and Horace Mann, strove to establish an educational system that would mix people of different backgrounds and reinforce the bonds of democracy was to be the foundation of the young republic. It was a radical idea that was opposed from the start by racial prejudice and fears of taxation. This is the first episode of a four part documentary series on the history of public education in the United States. Narrated by Meryl Streep. Directed by Sarah Mondale and Sarah Patton.

In 1992, Guatinanu Indian newlyweds from an Island in the Gulf of Mexico were exhibited in a locked golden cage as an exhibit titled "undiscovered Amerindians." The exhibit was in fact a performance by Coco Fusco and Guillermo Gomez-Pena. The performance was an exercise in faux anthropology based on racist images of natives. Presented eight times in four different countries, these simple performances evoked various responses – the most startling being the huge numbers of people who didn't find the idea of "natives" locked in a cage objectionable or all that unusual. The story of the performances reflect on the morality of exhibiting human beings as curiosities while illustrating the value of using comic fiction to address historical truths and tragedies. Guatinanu performance created by Guillermo Gomez-Pena and Coco Fusco. Directed by Coco Fusco and Paula Heredia.

Precious time has been spent on protracted debate over the term genocide. Meanwhile, regardless of what politicians and activists choose to call it, a colossal tragedy has torn Darfur apart. In March of 2006, NBC's Ann Curry traveled to the border between Chad and Sudan to cover the conflict that has claimed hundreds of thousands of lives. Introduced by Brian Williams, Curry tells the stories of people caught up in the violence: a mother, an orphan, an aid worker, and others who have been largely forgotten as Arab-on-Christian and sometimes Arab-on-Arab killing continues. Curry also talks to New York Times columnist Nicholas Kristof about Darfur's future and what can be done to shape it. Originally broadcast in 2006 as a segment of NBC Nightly News. The recipe for dal puri traveled with indentured workers from Indias Gangetic plain to southern Caribbean colonies of Britain and the Netherlands in the 19th Century. In the 1960s the wrapped roti migrated from Trinidad to North America, where it is known as Caribbean or West Indian roti and is popular in cities like New York and Toronto. As the dish moved from home fire to street stall to restaurant chain, and from festival to fast food, the flatbread was radically transformed in ingredients, cooking method, ways of eating and identity. Shot in Toronto, Trinidad and India, this documentary tracks dal puris remarkable passage across space and time, linking colonialism, migration and the globalization of tastes. The documentary features interviews with leading food writers and scholars including Pushpesh Pant, Naomi Duguid, Brinsley Samaroo, Radhika Monga and Patricia Mohammed. Directed by Richard Fung. COLOR 38 MIN DAUNTINGHA 2011
Funeral strippers work on Electric Flower Cars (EFC), which are trucks that have been converted to moving stages so that women can perform as the vehicles follow along with funerals or religious processions. EFC came to Taiwan's public attention in 1980 when newspapers began covering the phenomenon of stripping at funerals. There is a great deal of debate about whether this should be allowed to continue. In Taipei, Taiwan's capital, one often hears middle- and upper-class men complain about the harmful effects of this rural practice on public morality. In contrast, people in the industry see themselves as talented performers and fans of the practice say that it makes events more exciting. 'Dancing for the Dead' follows this story, interviewing Taiwan's academics, government officials, and people working in the EFC industry to try to make sense of this phenomenon. The film includes footage from nine different cities across Taiwan, including EFC performances, a funeral, and several religious events. The film contains semi-nudity but no full nudity. Some men's bloodshed appears in one scene with religious self-flagellation. Written and directed by Mark L. Moskowitz. Language: English and Mandarin Chinese; Subtitles: English.

The progress of film and television technology has made it possible to manipulate images without it being obvious. Even the use of archival pictures is no guarantee for authenticity since they can be used to substantiate different facts. During an interview with Stanley Kubrick's widow, the story came to light that Kubrick contributed to the popular success of the US space program with his film, 2001: A Space Odyssey. He had the support of NASA, which realized the film would popularize its costly space program. The director of this mockumentary took this revelation one step further by inventing an astonishing scenario for the images of the moon landing, and validating it with hijacked archival footage and authentic interviews out of context. Features footage with Stanley Kubrick, Richard Nixon, Buzz Aldrin, Christiane Kubrick, Henry Kissinger, and Donald Rumsfeld. Directed by William Karel. Language: English.

A young filmmaker attempts to understand his life by recording it on film, only to have his experiment turn into an alienating voyeuristic obsession. As news from the Vietnam War and social unrest blares over the radio, David Holzman uploads comic-neurotic monologues to his 16mm camera. When his relationship with Penny goes south, he retreats further into moving images, secretly recording his pretty neighbor and even tuning his lens to the TV shows he watches. No longer able to deal with life outside celluloid, all of his ties to the real world begin to erode. This satire of a narcissistic artist is also a fiction about the deceptions of cinematic illusionism. Early on, Holzman quotes Jean-Luc Goddard’s famous dictum that ‘the cinema is truth 24 frames-per-second.’ As Holzman soon learns, it lies just as often. Cast includes L.M. Panorama Series - Pregnancy and childbirth on the Africa continent can be extremely dangerous, more than half a million women die every year in pregnancy and childbirth. This program follows the efforts of Grace Kodindo, an obstetrician in the poverty-stricken central African country of Chad, to stop mothers in her country from dying. Kodindo and series reporter Steve Bradshaw travel to Honduras, which has cut maternal mortality far faster than some wealthier neighbors to see what is working in that developing country. Cutting maternal mortality by 75% by 2015 is one of the eight Millennium Development Goals set by 189 countries in 2000. When this program was produced in 2005 progress was far behind schedule and it is revealed that progress on the Millennium goals that pertain to women and children have advanced the slowest. COLOR 57 MIN INDIEXFLIX 2000
This documentary, narrated by Alec Baldwin, examines the life and legacy of the controversial community organizer Alinsky and his modern-day legacy. The first half of the program chronicles the Chicago-based organizer Saul Alinsky and three key Alinsky organizations to show how his techniques developed over time including the Back of the Yards Neighborhood Council, in Chicago's blighted stockyards in the 1930s. By forming an unprecedented coalition between the Catholic Church and the Meatpackers Union, Alinsky was able to force several landmark concessions from the meatpacking industry. These three organizations show how Alinsky's ideas, in turn, influenced the civil rights movement, the farmworkers struggle and many Vietnam era political protests. The second half of the program jumps forward to the late 1990s and examines two contemporary nonprofit organizations that are part of the Industrial Areas Foundation a national network. Directed by Bob Hercules and Bruce Orenstein. Language: English.

Derrida: (DVD) 13540,ID 13540,DM
COLOR 85 MIN ZEITGEIST 2002
A portrait of brilliant and iconoclastic French philosopher Jacques Derrida. He is best known for originating the movement known as "deconstruction." His radical rethinking of the precepts on which Western metaphysics are founded has deeply influenced the studies of literature, philosophy, ethics, architecture, and law, indelibly marking the intellectual landscape of the 20th and 21st century. Not a conventional biographical portrait, the film's bold visual style weaves together rare verite footage of Derrida in his private life with reflections on deconstruction, violence, the structure of love, the history of philosophy, and the death of his mother. A film by Kirby Dick and Amy Ziering Kofman. Original score by Ryuichi Sakamoto. This DVD version features chapter selections; Audio commentary by the filmmakers; Never-before-seen interviews with Jacques Derrida; Deleted scenes, with alternative camera angles; Derrida on "Derrida" Q&A with Jacques Derrida and the filmmakers at the New York premiere; In English and French, with English subtitles and closed captioned in English.

The works and words of architect Nader Khalili : How-To apprentice volume Series - Architect Nader Khalili demonstrates the essence of designing Earth Architecture using Superadobe technology. He shares the secrets of nature’s timeless principles and timeless materials to design homes, infrastructure, eco-villages, and even a town, that work in harmony with the environment almost anywhere in the world. Khalili shows us how to integrate the forms and geometries of arches, domes and vaults with natural forces such as gravity, friction, sun and wind. We learn practical and simple ways to design and construct a home or community that is resistant to fire, flood, hurricanes, earthquake or man-made disasters. Superadobe technology (sandbag, tubes, and barbed wire) is designed and developed by architect Nader Khalili, and engineered by P.J.Vittore. Prototypes have been constructed and tested for the City of Hesperia, California, Building and Safety Department, in consultation with I.C.B.O. (International Conference of Building Officials), in the forms of arches, vaults, and domes between 1993 and 1996, and updated to 2007. These successfully passed California's strict seismic codes for the structures. Directed by Dastan Khalili. Architects: Architecture; Domes; Adobe houses.; Earth houses.; Khalili, Nader.

Markus Imhoof Collection Series - Bernward Vesper is the son of a famous Nazi poet and the life companion of the female terrorist Gudrun Ensslin. His story stands as an enlarged and therefore recognizable example of those influences imprinting the whole generation of the sixties: Those born during the war learn how to think during the German new beginning. However, instead of generation of the sixties: Those born during the war learn how to think during the German new beginning. However, instead of being able to orient themselves in relation to a fatherly ideal, they find themselves confronted with their fathers' guilt. This situation leads to angry, moral demands from the children. After the year of student revolts, these demands culminate in either resignation or in the blind hatred of terrorism. The film tells two childhood stories: The first one narrates how a young father and his five-year-old son escape terrorism. The second story describes the development of this father, who gets involved with terrorism out of opposition to his Nazi father. Based on the autobiographical novel by Bernward Vesper. Cast includes Markus Boysen, Corinna Kirchhoff, Claude-Oliver Rudolf and Will Quadflieg. Written and directed by Markus Imhoof. The disappearing of Tuvalu : Trouble in paradise : (DVD)
16951,ID
COLOR 75 MIN DOCUMENTAR 2004
A detailed overview of contemporary life in the tiny South Pacific country of Tuvalu, this film documents the earth's first sovereign nation faced with total destruction due to the effects of global warming. With a population of about 11,000 living on a total landmass of only 20 square miles – less than Manhattan – spread over nine low-lying atolls 600 miles to the north of Fiji, Tuvalu has been inhabited for over four millennia. The government of Tuvalu and other concerned organizations are directing their pleas for solutions to the wealthy countries whose high pollution emissions could be the central human contribution to global warming. Observation, narration, and interviews with Tuvalu citizens from various walks of life flesh out a full portrait of a unique community confronting a dubious future on the front lines of a global environmental assault. Narrated by Wilson Lambert. Directed by Christopher Horner. In English.

A documentary film that looks at the fates of the public monuments memorializing Communists leaders following the collapse of Communism in the Soviet Union. After the Russian Revolution, Lenin was instrumental in the governments resolution to replace monuments depicting Tsars and their servants and replacing them with ones depicting and honoring revolutionary thinkers such as Marx and Engels. After Lenin's death his proposed list of monuments was ignored in favor of monuments devoted to the new regime's leaders, such as himself and Stalin. After the fall of communism many of the monuments were demolished or stored in the "Temporary Museum of Totalitarian Art" in a Moscow park. The film features rare archival footage and interviews with sculptors, art historians, gallery, and museum directors. Directed by Mark Lewis and Laura Mulvey. Across the Arab world, the impact of satellite TV has been profound. More than a decade after what is often described as the Arab satellite revolution, satellite channels have created a virtual Arab metropolis exploring new ideas, pushing boundaries and encouraging debate – from the ground up. Before the advent of satellite dishes, most Arab viewers depended on terrestrial state television, which meant few channels and some form of government oversight of everything that went to air. Since 1990, the number of satellite channels sky-rocketed from one to more than two hundred today. The outcome was the introduction of independent journalism in the Arab world that includes live reports from the field, news analysis, and talk shows that bring political debate and taboo subjects like homosexuality, polygamy, wife battering, and equality between the sexes into the public spotlight. WIDE ANGLE goes behind the scenes at Arab television channel MBC in Cairo for an inside look at the hit all-female talk show, KALAM NAWAEM. The film provides a nuanced portrait of four Arab women harnessing the power of transnational satellite TV to boldly and effectively push social reform. With exclusive access to both the private and the professional lives of the hosts and producers, the cameras capture censorship discussions, tension and camaraderie in the Dressing room, and viewer reactions on the Arab street. Narrated by Jay O. Sanders. Directed by Bregtje van der Haak. Updates the content of “Dreamworlds 2” incorporating even more contemporary images culled from music videos to illustrate how the narratives and images from music videos shape individual and cultural attitudes about sexuality. How men and women understand themselves and each other is influenced by popular culture. One of the more powerful aspects of popular culture influencing young people is the music video. The systematic representation of women in music videos, and how these representations tell a dangerous and narrow set of stories about what it means to be female or male is illustrated by this study. Music videos are dissected to demonstrate how disturbing images have become ubiquitous, and normal. When the images presented of women are viewed separately and within the context of the music video, the dangerous message and the influence of the visuals becomes clear. After nearly 20 years of living in the continental U.S., filmmaker Christen Hepuakoama Marquez returns to Hawaii to learn the meaning her name. In Hawaii culture, parents don't give a name, they haku inoa. Haku means to weave, and inoa is the Hawaiian word for name. In traditional Hawaiian culture a name is considered a sacred extension of a person's identity. Words are artfully woven together like the fronds in a moana (pandanus leaf mat) to create a poem that tells the name's name's heritage and destiny. Marquez's mother Elena created her name and is the only person who knows its true meaning. But Elena was diagnosed with schizophrenia more than 20 years ago, and has a history of being physically abusive. Marquez's relationship with her mother suffered because of the illness, and her years away from the islands eroded her knowledge of Native Hawaiian culture is meager. As Marquez doggedly pursues this piece of her identity, she reconnects with her mother and struggles through the fights and misunderstandings to unlock the mystery of her own name. This documentary critically considers the Oakland Unified Schools' 1996 "Ebonics Revolution." Building on the success of local instructional programming, the Resolution sought to improve African-American student performance by acknowledging African-American linguistic patterns and improving "the English acquisition and application skills of African-American students." The film aims to raise the topic of Ebonics in a contemporary and scholarly context, and is the first documentary to address this complex issue through an engagement with linguistic and educational research. Principal

Eclipse series 27: Raffaello Matarazzo’s runaway melodramas
In the late 1940s and early 1950s, film critics, international festivalgoers, and other studious viewers were swept up by the tide of Italian neorealism. Meanwhile, mainstream Italian audiences were indulging in a different kind of cinema experience: the sensational, extravagant melodramas of director Raffaello Matarazzo. Though turning to neorealism for character types and settings, these haywire hits about splintered love affairs and broken homes, all starring mustachioed matinee idol Amedeo Nazzari, and icon of feminine purity Yvonne Sanson, luxuriate in delirious plot twists and overheated religious symbolism. Four of them are collected here, chronicles of men and women on long and serpentine roads to redemption, each less restrained and more wildly entertaining than the last.

Renowned as a silent-film pioneer, German emigre Ernst Lubitsch had another claim to fame: he helped invent the modern musical movie. With the advent of sound and audiences clamoring for ‘talkies,’ Lubitsch combined his love for European operettas and his mastery of film to create these elegant, bawdy pre-Code delights, featuring some of the greatest stars of early Hollywood as well as that elusive style of comedy that would thereafter be known as ‘the Lubitsch touch.’

The works and words of architect Nader Khalili Series - Demonstrates Iranian-born California architect Nader Khalili’s method of building low-tech earth structures through the building and firing of a ceramic dome in California. Explains that these earth domes are low-cost, environmentally-friendly structures that can be built quickly with only a few natural materials. The Dirt Dome was designed by an Afghan engineer who designed a dome for the United States Army, and the Sunrise Dome was designed for a monastery in New Mexico. Conventional fired brick Rumi Dome models, engineered by P.J. Vittore Ltd. have been constructed and tested for the City of Hesperia, California, Building and Safety Department, in consultation with I.C.B.O. (International Conference of Building Officials) between 1993 and 1996, and successfully passed California required codes. Directed by Dastan Khalili.

A portrait of Gregory Bateson, celebrated anthropologist, philosopher, author, naturalist, and systems theorist. His story is lovingly told by his youngest daughter, Nora, with footage from Gregory’s own films shot in the 1930s with his wife Margaret Mead in Bali and New Guinea, along with photographs, filmed lectures, and interviews. Gregory Bateson was a man who studied the interrelationships of the complex systems we live in with scientific rigor and enormous integrity. His theories, such as “the double bind” and “the pattern which connects”, continue to impact the fields of anthropology, psychiatry, information science, cybernetics, urban planning, biology, and ecology, challenging people to think in new ways. Through this film, Nora Bateson sets out to show that his ideas are not just fodder for academic theory, but can help instruct a way of life. She presents his thinking using a richly personal perspective, focusing on the stories Bateson used to present his ideas and how the beauty of life itself provided the framework of his life’s pursuits.

COLOR 59 MIN MEDIA EDUC 2015
A film about the accelerating movement to privatize Americas public schools. The filmmakers travels to public school districts across the United States to witness the impact of the privatization movement. As public schools across the country struggle for funding, complicated by the impact of poverty and politics, some question the future and effectiveness of public schools in the U.S. For free-market reformers, private investors and large education corporations, this controversy spells opportunity in turning public schools over to private interests. The documentary features striking footage from school protests, raucous school board meetings and interviews with some of the most well-known educators in the country. As a parent the filmmaker is searching for what the privatization movement looks like in practice across the nation and what it means for his own children. The film presents the key issues at stake and makes a case for why public education matters. Written by Cindy Malone, Brian Malone, and Kristen Kidd. Directed by Brian Malone.

A film from Zimbabwe about how AIDS affects a family. Four children are devastated by the tragic death of both of their parents. Their parents had contracted and died from the AIDS virus. The two eldest siblings Tamari and Itai are forced to grow up fast and take care of adult responsibilities when family and neighbors turn a blind eye to the children's plight due to the stigma of AIDS. The eldest son Itai leaves home for the big city, leaving his sister to fend for herself and her two younger children. It takes a tragedy to make the community realize that to ignore the plight of the children would continue the harm to society that the AIDS virus has wrought as they are everybody's children. Story by Shimmer Chinodya. Screenplay by John Riber, Andrew Whaley, and Tsiuti Dangarembga. Directed by Tsiuti Dangarembga. Language: English, Kiswahili dubbed, French dubbed, Shona dubbed, Ndebele dubbed. This PAL DVD needs a multi-region or a code-free DVD player.

Renowned British street artist Banksy presents the inside story of Street Art through the story of one man’s obsessive video recording of street-level art making in progress. The film tells the story of Thierry Guetta, a man who has an obsessive need to film his life. His cousin, the street artist Space Invader, visits from France, and Thierry follows Space Invader’s artistic street exploits, recording them with his video camera. From there, Guetta’s obsessive tendencies lead him to document the work of other street artists, including the infamous Banksy. Through Guetta’s involvement with Banksy, the street artist encourages him to use his raw footage to make a street art documentary and Guetta tries his own hand at making street art, adopting the name Mr. Brainwash. Throughout the film, Banksy provides details and perspective on Thierry Guetta’s rise within the street art landscape. A fictionalized interpretation of an experiment by Stanford University in 1971 which asked for 24 male students to volunteer for a simulated prison experience as prisoners or guards to determine behavioral and psychological consequences. The film draws strongly from a novelization that was loosely based on the Stanford experiment and which featured a generally invented version. The time frame of the original experiment was two weeks, however the experiment was terminated after six days and accounts indicate there was no actual violence. In the filmed version an assortment of ever-spiraling abuse and retaliation culminates in a prisoner rebellion that unleashes even more violence and inhuman urges as personal and professional control alike is lost or abandoned. In an economy that is experiencing the loss of many high tech and manufacturing jobs to downsizing and overseas competition, America is experiencing growth in employment opportunities in the service sector. Young people are coming of age in a service economy. The jobs are low-wage, part-time, and offer few benefits, little training, and no job security. Young workers, concentrated in service sector jobs, bear the brunt of the rapid and unregulated expansion of the low-wage service economy. Working youth, eighteen and older, enjoy no special legislative protection as do minors, no extended media or public attention, and no substantial interest groups advocating or organizing on their behalf. The stereotype of carefree and undeserving youth, belies the reality for a generation of young Americans in the service sector whose lives depend on the salaries and benefits being offered in the “McJob” economy. The film features Eric Schlosser, author of “Fast Food Nation”; Julianne Maleaux, economist; Bill Fletcher; Stuart Tannock; and Sara Flocks. A Film by Casey Peck and Jeremy Blasi. The first film to give an African perspective on the disturbing phenomenon of abducting child soldiers into the continents recent civil wars. Ezra stands out among other films because it is a complex psychological study, not just of the brutalizing, healing and reintegration into society of one of thousands of traumatized former child soldiers, but also as a key for reconstructing these societies themselves. Ezra is structured around the week-long questioning of a 16 year old boy, Ezra, before a version of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission created by Sierra Leone in 2002 in the wake of its decade-long civil war. This hearing is then inter-cut with chronological flashbacks to pivotal moments during Ezras ten years in the rebel faction which made him who he is. These commissions, based on the idea of transitional justice and modeled on the one in South Africa, were meant not to be punitive but restorative and therapeutic, both for the violated and the violators. Only after Ezra confronts his crimes, how he came to commit them and repents, will he be ready to rejoin society as well as make peace with himself. In a sense, the audience is placed in the position of the judges, initially seeing Ezra only in terms of his crimes against humanity, but, gradually coming to realize he is more a victim than a victimizer.

Henry Louis Gates, Jr. explores how the immigrant experience shaped America and how a person's ancestors shape who they are.
Through the stories and family histories of twelve renowned celebrities, the latest tools of genealogy and genetics are used to explore the threads of his guests' lives back to their origins.
Along the way, the many stories he uncovers illuminate the American experience. The twelve people featured in the series include Elizabeth Alexander, Mario Batali, Stephen Colbert, Louise Erdrich, Malcolm Gladwell, Eva Longoria, Yo-Yo Ma, Mike
Nichols, Queen Noor, Dr. Mehmet Oz, Meryl Streep, Kristi
Yamaguchi. Written and hosted by Henry Louis Gates, Jr. The Contemporary Asian American female actors re-enact scenes from popular Hollywood films. The actresses re-examine three generations of Asian American femme fatales, including the lotus blossom, dragon lady, prostitute with a heart of gold, and the contemporary dominatrix roles; roles played by Hollywood legends Anna May Wong, Nancy Kwan, and contemporary star Lucy Liu. Performing the roles the young actors collide with the "ghosts" of Asian American women in Hollywood through revised endings of their major films performed on the streets of San Francisco. The women then discuss sexuality in their roles and in terms of their own self-formation as actresses of color. Written and directed by Celine Parrenas Shimizu.

COLOR 105 MIN NMC UNITED 2013
The film is set in Baghdad at the end of the 1940's and early 1950's, when the Jewish community was split into two groups: one pro-communist and the other Zionist. This rift is reflected in the family of 16-year-old Kabi Imari, the young hero of the movie. When the Iraqi authorities arrest his uncle Hizkel Imari, a communist journalist, for publishing an anti-government article following the hanging of a Jewish merchant in Basra, Kabi takes on the task of locating him. The story depicts the volatile political atmosphere in Iraq which affected the Jewish community in Baghdad after the Farhud of June 1941, when Iraqi Jews were attacked and killed and Jewish property was looted. It portrays a Jewish community that was affected by the Arab society around it, while at the same time bound by ties of friendship. Actors speak almost entirely in the Iraqi Arabic dialects spoken by the Jews and Muslims of Baghdad. Based on the novel by Eli Amir. Fela Anikulapo-Kuti created a new musical movement, Afrobeat, a combination of jazz, funk, and Nigerian percussion styles. It was also a political force, a propulsive delivery system of Fela's revolutionary ideas, pitched against the dictatorial Nigerian government of the 1970s and 1980s. His influence helped bring a tilt towards democracy in Nigeria and promoted Pan-Africanist politics to the world. The power and potency of Fela's music and message endure today. Five broken cameras : (5 broken cameras) : (DVD) 2011

“5 Broken Cameras” is a deeply personal, first-hand-account of non violent resistance in Bil’in, a West Bank village threatened by encroaching Israeli settlements. Shot almost entirely by Palestinian farmer Emad Burnat, who bought his first camera in 2005 to record the birth of his youngest son, the footage was later given to Israeli co-director Guy Davidi to edit. Structured around the violent destruction of each one of Burnat’s cameras, the filmmakers’ collaboration follows one family’s evolution over five years of village turmoil. Burnat watches from behind the lens as olive trees are bulldozed, protests intensify and lives are lost. Written and directed by Guy Davidi. Directed by Emad Burnat and Guy Davidi. Copenhagen, 1944. The exploits of Flame and Citron, a duo of assassins with the Danish resistance movement are becoming legendary. They begin by dispatching Danish collaborators and graduate to the occupying Nazis, after which the SS puts bounties on their heads. Their ultimate goal: Gestapo commandant Kari Heinz Hoffmann. As loyal Danes with a hatred of the Nazi occupation, they kill Danes who are collaborating. Flame seems empowered by killing, growing ever more reckless with his tactics. Citron's dread increases almost hourly, as the running, hiding, and fighting meetings with his estranged wife gnaws at his soul. Who can they trust? Who is giving their orders? What if there has been insidious infiltration and their skills are being misused? For these good men, resistance isn't futile, but it does come with its own terrible cost. The cast includes Thure Lindhardt, Mads Mikkelson, Stine Stengade, Peter Mygind, Flemming Engebret and Christian Berkel. Directed by Ole Christian Madsen. The sea is forgotten until disaster strikes. But perhaps the biggest seagoing disaster is the global supply chain, which may be in a more fundamental way than financial speculation - leads the world economy to the abyss. This essayistic, political documentary follows container cargo aboard ships, barges, trains and trucks, listening to workers, engineers, planners, politicians, and those marginalized by the global transport system. It allows viewers to discover the most sophisticated expression of the belief that the maritime economy, and the sea itself, is somehow obsolete. Strangers Abroad Series - Franz Boas is considered the founding father of American anthropology. In 1883, he was a young German scientist who came to North America to map the Canadian Arctic coastline and indulge his new interest in the study of other cultures. His studies of the Eskimos he worked with lead him to devote himself to learning to understand the determinants of human behavior. He became absorbed by the common features that unite humans everywhere. He made the study of culture his life's work, doing fieldwork in both the Arctic and the North West Coast of America among the Indian tribes. He taught at Columbia University for 50 years. Boas was the first distinguished social scientist in the United States to challenge the prevailing concept of racial inferiority and actively campaigned on behalf of black people in America in the early part of the 20th Century. Written and presented by Bruce Dakowski.

The American Experience Series - In 1961, an integrated band of college students bought tickets on a Greyhound bus bound for the Deep South. Calling themselves the Freedom Riders their intent was to confront and call attention to the inequalities that plagued the nation. This inspirational documentary is about the men and women of this courageous band and features access to influential figures on both sides of the issue. The film chronicles a chapter of American history that stands as an astonishing testament to the accomplishment of youth and what can result from the incredible combination of personal conviction and the courage to organize against all odds. Based in part on the book “Freedom riders” by Raymond Arsenault. Written and directed by Stanley Nelson. English captioned for the deaf and hearing impaired.

The Harvey Richards film collection Series - The story of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee's voter registration campaign in Mississippi in 1963. The courage, determination, and sacrifice of the common people of the South used to help end racial segregation is revealed through interviews with African American farmers. They share stories of intimidation, official brutality, and violence. Amzie Moore collaborated with filmmaker Harvey Richards leading Richards through the Mississippi Delta voter registration campaign, interviewing share croppers, student activists, students, and others in the struggle for freedom and the right to vote. A second version of the film with the SNCC participation called “We’ll never turn back.” Harvey Richards is a filmmaker and still photographer who documented the political upheaval in the United States of the 1960's as it occurred on the West Coast, the films were used as organizing aids by the United Farm Workers, the Sierra Club, the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee and other groups operating at the time. A documentary film by Harvey Richards.
