The Harvey Richards film collection Series - The story of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee's voter registration campaign in Mississippi in 1963. The courage, determination, and sacrifice of the common people of the South used to help end racial segregation is revealed through interviews with African American farmers. They share stories of intimidation, official brutality, and violence. Amzie Moore collaborated with filmmaker Harvey Richards leading Richards through the Mississippi Delta voter registration campaign, interviewing share croppers, student activists, students, and others in the struggle for freedom and the right to vote. A second version of the film with the SNCC participation called “We’ll never turn back.” Harvey Richards is a filmmaker and still photographer who documented the political upheaval in the United States of the 1960's as it occurred on the West Coast, the films were used as organizing aids by the United Farm Workers, the Sierra Club, the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee and other groups operating at the time. A documentary film by Harvey Richards.

The American Experience Series - In 1961, an integrated band of college students bought tickets on a Greyhound bus bound for the Deep South. Calling themselves the Freedom Riders their intent was to confront and call attention to the inequalities that plagued the nation. This inspirational documentary is about the men and women of this courageous band and features access to influential figures on both sides of the issue. The film chronicles a chapter of American history that stands as an astonishing testament to the accomplishment of youth and what can result from the incredible combination of personal conviction and the courage to organize against all odds. Based in part on the book “Freedom riders” by Raymond Arsenault. Written and directed by Stanley Nelson. English captioned for the deaf and hearing impaired.

In the hot and deadly summer of 1964, the nation could not turn away from Mississippi. Over 10 memorable weeks known as Freedom Summer, more than 700 student volunteers joined with organizers and local African Americans in a historic effort to shatter the foundations of white supremacy in one of the nation’s most segregated states... even in the face of intimidation, physical violence, and death. Directed by Stanley Nelson. In English with English subtitles for the deaf and hard-of-hearing.

A young teacher battles an uncaning system to make the classroom matter to her students' lives at an inner city school torn apart by violence and racial tension. She gets the students to write and share their own stories and in turn hear the stories of their fellow students. The students learn the power of tolerance, reclaim their shattered lives and change their world.

Based on the book "The freedom writers diary" by The Freedom Writers with Erin Gruwell. Cast includes Hilary Swank, Scott Glenn, Imelda Staunton, Patrick Dempsey, Mario. 61 MIN MEDIA EDUC 2006

Katherine Sender’s examines television’s portrayal of gays, lesbians, bisexuals, and transgender people. The documentary continues where her documentary “Off the straight & narrow” (1998) left off, casting a critical eye over the growth of gay images on television, and provides a survey of network dramas, sitcoms, reality shows, and premium cable programming to show how the depictions of GLBT’s are often marked by ambivalence and tension. While GLBT characters and plotlines has grown more prevalent and complex, the images and stories continue to be shaped by narrow commercial imperatives. Sender warns that the evolution of GLBT representations is less an indication of big media’s commitment to social justice and equality and more a recognition of GLBT consumers and gay taste by advertisers and media conglomerates. Featuring interviews with Howard Buford, Joshua Gamson, Larry Gross, Lisa Henderson, Katherine Sender, and Suzanna Danuta. Sections include: Introduction - Going mainstream: network narratives - Mighty real: gays and lesbians in non-fiction TV - A piece of the pie: segmenting audiences - gbt: new transgender visibility - Here & queer: gay television in context. A documentary about the role of photography, photographers, and the art of image making in Ghana. Photographers, sculptors, and painters are interviewed and discuss the economic, social, cultural, aesthetic, and spiritual motivations of their work. The artists display innovation and improvisation in their work. The influence of American print media on local artists exists but the resulting work is so transformed in the process that the original source is almost unrecognizable. Issues of gender arise when it becomes clear all the artists and photographers are men but their customers are both men and women. A film by Tobias Wendl and Nancy du Plessis.

In 2009, Delaware River Basin native Josh Fox was presented with an interesting proposal: lease his family lands to a natural gas company for a new method of drilling called hydraulic fracturing, and get a check for $100,000. He wouldn't have to do anything but sit back and collect the money. Curious about the process, Fox embarks on an exploration of other areas where natural gas drilling was already in progress, to observe firsthand any potential downsides. In Dimock, Pennsylvania, a town surrounded by fracking activity, he hears stories of wells exploding, black water, flammable drinking water, headaches, pains, long-term sickness. Fox goes on to tour 25 states, cataloging an endless string of stories of harm done to innocent and undocumented Americans whose land has become toxic and explaining the legislation pushed through by former vice president Dick Cheney, exempting energy companies from key environmental acts–exemptions that make fracking invisible to any regulation or monitoring. Fox becomes an advocate for the cause of the people whose complaints are ignored by the natural gas corporations and the American government. The film documents the pitfalls and perils–borne of avarice of the most bloodless, ruthless kind–of the largest domestic natural gas drilling boom in American history, with the potential to poison millions. NBC SERIES - An exploration of the new and fast growing field of epigeneceics. Epigenetics proposes that there may be more to inheritance than genes alone, that a second "epigenetic" chemical code sits on top of regular DNA and controls how genes are expressed, turning them on and off with dramatic consequences for an individual's health. The Epigenome is inherited; it also appears to respond to environment and lifestyle factors. Implications for treatment of disease and preventive health medicine are discussed. The hidden influence of epigenome could not only affect an individual's health today, but that of their descendants far into the future. Directed by Sarah

The cosmos has a secret ingredient: a swarm of invisible particles that fill every cubic inch of space. The particles are called neutrinos; they have no electric charge, so they are invisible to all normal scientific equipment, thus the nickname the ghost particle. Trillions of them zip through our bodies but we don't notice a thing. Nova tells the 70-year struggle of scientists to understand them. Physicists John Bahcall and Ray Davis quest to prove the neutrinos existence took them to remote places with mixed results. Their ultimate conclusion about the true nature of the neutrino proved to be even more bizarre than anyone had suspected. Narrated by

A three-minute excerpt of Bill T. Jones' "Ghostcatching," with sequences from all scenes in the original 8-minute version.
"Ghostcatching" was a virtual dance installation exhibited at the Cooper Union School of Art in New York City. Also, a "process sequence illustrates how Jane's body was motion-captured and then abstracted into 3D "gesture drawings." Two further videos show Jane proving herself of the identities that helped compose the final piece. Installation by Bill T. Jones, Paul Kaiser,

A film that presents how the spirit world and the world of numbers intersect in Thailand. The Thai people were hit especially hard by the devastating financial crash of the Thai baht and the Asian monetary crisis. The Thai lottery has taken an important position in the culture, with displaced farmers barely surviving by selling lottery tickets on the streets of Bangkok, even that way of life might soon end due to a new virtual ticket system. The film includes a possession sequence that is boosted by mobile technology, which takes place within the half-built buildings of Bangkok, buildings left unfinished when funding dried up after the financial crash. A film by Alan Klima. Narrated by An examination of the abuses which took place at the notorious Abu Ghraib military prison in Iraq. The abuses documented in photographs that were distributed around the world occurred in fall of 2003. Contextualizing the abuse with interviews with perpetrators, witnesses, and victims, the filmmakers probe the psychology of how typical American men and women came to commit the atrocious acts. Also, the policy decisions that eroded the compliance with the Geneva Conventions are explored to show how the U.S. policies contributed to making torture a reality and what the events that took place at Abu Ghraib says about America, the U.S. government, the military and humankind in general. Written by Jack Yanover. Directed by Rory Kennedy. In the years since Mach Picchu was discovered by Hiram Bingham in 1911, there have been countless theories about this "Lost city of the Incas," yet it remains an enigma. Why did the Incas build it on such an inaccessible site, clinging to the steep face of a mountain? Who lived among its stone buildings, farmed its emerald green terraces, and drank from its sophisticated aqueduct system? Ghosts of Machu Picchu presented by NOVA explores the extraordinary trail of clues that began on that fateful day in 1911 and continues to the present. Narrated by Craig Schelor. THE GIRLS IN THE BAND tells the poignant, untold stories of female jazz and big band instrumentalists and their fascinating, groundbreaking journeys from the late 30's to the present day. These incredibly talented women endured sexism, racism and diminished opportunities for decades, yet continued to persevere, inspire and elevate their talents in a field that seldom welcomed them. Narrated by a sassy bunch of players who worked primarily in the 1930s and 40s including the saxophonist Roz Cron and the pianist Marian McPartland this is a story of punishing sexism bested by humor, determination and raw talent. Today, there is a new breed of gifted young women taking their rightful place in the world of jazz, which can no longer deny their talents. Directed by Judy Chaikin.

People and animals have historically moved to better climates, the problem now is that better climates are already occupied. Observation, historical records, and computer models lead to the conclusion that temperatures are rising, no one can be certain how high they will go, or when, or what will happen. It is conjectured that as temperatures rise the ice caps will melt causing the sea level to rise, low-lying areas to flood; diseases and predators will proliferate; rains will increase in some parts of the world, while other areas will experience drought and the resulting mass starvation. A look at the life and times of Senator John Kerry. Kerry is a United States Senator, Vietnam veteran, and candidate for President of the United States of America. Kerry rose to national prominence as a young war veteran who organized protests against the Vietnam Conflict. As a young man Kerry volunteered for military service and served with valor and was wounded in conflict. He grew disillusioned with the war and the United States handling of the conflict. Upon his return home he worked with other veterans to oppose and protest the war and proved himself an eloquent speaker on a national level. The film is more than a biography of John Kerry, it is also the story of an American generation that came of age in the tumultuous 1960’s. The film was released during the 2004 Presidential election in which Kerry was the Democratic candidate. During his campaign Republican groups aired commercials which attempted to distort Kerry’s military record. Based on the book “Tour of Duty” by Douglas Brinkley. Directed by George Butler. Author and professor S. Louisa Wei tells the story of filmmaker Esther Eng, the first woman to direct Chinese-language film in the US, and the most prominent woman director in Hong Kong in the 1930's. A San Francisco native and open lesbian, her contribution to film history is sadly overlooked – her 11 feature films mostly lost. After the retirement of director Dorothy Arzner in 1943 and before Ida Lupino began directing in 1949, Eng was the only woman directing feature length films in the US. Wei's documentary paints a fascinating picture of how Eng's career in filmmaking broke through gender and racial boundaries in Hollywood and Hong Kong, at a time when opportunities for Chinese women in the industry were few and far between. With a captivating archive of newly discovered images and interviews with those who knew her, Wei uncovers a rich chapter of film history that challenges both gender hierarchies and national narratives. A film by Louisa Wei. In English, with Chinese subtitles.

The Golden Venture, a freighter carrying 300 undocumented Chinese passengers ran aground off New York in June of 1993, the deaths and deportations that occurred in the aftermath mark a crucial turning point in United States immigration policies, ushering in another repressive era of immigration policy and tightening borders. The film chronicles the ongoing struggle of passengers who were aboard the ill-fated freighter which ignited a media circus and became a symbol of a growing national concern over illegal immigration. The aftermath of the Golden Venture is used as a case study in the politics of immigration, the film also examines the culture of China's Fujian province where the undocumented Chinese had left. The film also looks at cross-ideological coalition building and the role art can play in the struggle for human rights. Narrated by Tim Robbins. Directed by Peter Cohn. In English and Chinese.

Details the rise and fall of Henry Hill, a Brooklyn kid who grows up idolizing the "wise guys" from his neighborhood. He begins hanging around the mobsters and doing odd jobs until he gains the notice of local chieftain Paulie Cicero. In his teens, Hill distinguishes himself as a "stand-up guy" by choosing jail time rather than ratting on his accomplices. From that moment on, he is a part of the family. Along with his partner Tommy, he rises through the ranks to become Paulie's lieutenant. Soon he finds himself the target of both the feds and the mobsters. A retelling of Sophocles' classical tragedy "Oedipus at Colonus" through the medium of modern gospel. Performed at the American Musical Festival in Philadelphia and recorded for Television. The performance traces the epic storyline of the original text, while incorporating aspects of Oedipus Rex. Antigone, and inspirational narrative. Told from the perspective of a Black Pentecostal preacher and his congregation: this play dramatizes legendary Greek character Oedipus' last days on Earth. Having blinded himself out of guilt, Oedipus makes a solace-seeking pilgrimage to Colonus, the place where he believes he is meant to die. Primarily through song, the preacher and his congregation translate this story of redemption into a Christian parable. Cast includes Morgan Freeman, Isabella Monk, Carl Lumbly, Robert Earl Jones, Jevetta Steele, Kevin Davis, The J.D. Steele Singers, J.J. then what is left of freedom? Choice? Right and wrong? You study philosophers asking how far the scientific method might be applied. Immanuel Kant responds to the challenges raised by the new scientific consciousness in the metaphysical and the moral arenas. You study Edmund Burke, the Anglo-Irish philosopher-statesman whose eloquent critiques of the French Revolution made him an architect of modern conservatism, as well as the giant of the liberal tradition, John Stuart Mill. Lectures follow on G.W.F. Hegel's philosophy of history, and Karl Marx's appropriation of a materialist version of Hegelianism as part of his effort to develop scientific laws of progress potent enough to overcome all human alienation. Because causal determination undermines the possibility of freedom, choice, and virtue, this is a period of spiritual turmoil as well as of material advance. The final four lectures, on Søren Kierkegaard, Arthur Schopenhauer, and Friedrich Nietzsche, discuss three brilliant exponents of this period's striving toward a new ground for the human self and its aspirations. Includes course guide book.

Psychologists William James and Sigmund Freud still affect us. James's philosophy of pragmatism seems characteristically American, yet bears a striking resemblance to many of Nietzsche's ideas. Freud applied the tools of science to the philosopher's sanctum sanctorum the mind itself. Different 20th-century attempts to claim a new ground for the understanding of self and society are explored. You study the phenomenology of Edmund Husserl, the existentialism of Martin Heidegger, and the Frankfurt School's efforts to use the ideas of Marx and Freud as a basis for rational moral and political engagement, the structuralism of the linguist Ferdinand de Saussure and the anthropologist Claude Levi-Strauss. You conclude Part VI by studying Max Weber's sociology, the ideas of A. J. Ayer, and the giant of the 20th century, Ludwig Wittgenstein.

You examine Karl Popper's argument that scientific hypotheses must remain "falsifiable," and the related but distinct imperative for whole societies to remain "open." You then analyze Thomas Kuhn's contribution in showing how scientific knowledge works in "the real world." You see how the communication-based theories of Jurgen Habermas bears upon both the way we understand the world and our understanding of the human world. You study Alvin Gouldner's ironic class-based critique of Marxism. Postmodernism and the work of the French philosopher and literary theorist Jacques Derrida much-discussed ideology of our own days explored sympathetically yet critically. You conclude the series by studying the work of several widely influential American philosophers Willard Quine, Richard Rorty, John Rawls, Alasdair MacIntyre, and Robert Nozick. In 2112 A.D., Earth has been transformed by cataclysmic earthquakes and tidal waves, and the continents have sunken under the sea. On the isolated Candlestick Island lives a rambunctious, pre-adolescent Mangchi. Mangchi, who lives with his grandfather, dreams of discovering the world outside of his tiny village. One day, a small plane carrying Princess Poplar, from the kingdom of Jemius, crashes into Candlestick Island. Soldiers of the evil Moonk have been pursuing the princess. Mangchi manages to ward off the attack with his "great echo".

"Great Echo" is a concentration of energy compacted into a single powerful force, and Mangchi is learning this art from his grandfather. But now, Mangchi must leave Candlestick Island to destroy Moonk and restore world peace. Featuring the voices of Kim Seo-Young, Bae Jeong-Min, Choi Seok-Pil, Kim Yong-Jun. Directed by Ahn Tae-Geun. A political thriller set in the near future at a point-in-time when Korean unification will soon become a reality. The North and the South agree to re-open a railway between the two states. Japan attempts to disrupt the unification by claiming ownership of the railway, dating back to the time of Japanese occupation and colonial rule. The President of South Korea believes that if the Great Seal of Emperor Gojong can be found it will prove that Japan has no claim to the railway and will be unable to stop the unification. The film has a very nationalistic stance and is very critical of Japan's historical distortion of its rule of the Korean Peninsula from 1910 to 1945. Upon his father’s death, Florante, a classically trained guitarist returns to the Philippines after 12 years of absence. During his stay he rediscovers the music of harana - a long-forgotten tradition of Filipino serenading when men sang under the window at night to fearlessly declare their love for a woman. Intent on unearthing these unheralded songs, Florante travels to the remote provinces where he discovers three of the last surviving practitioners - a farmer, a fisherman and a tricycle driver. Astounded by their golden voices, Florante asks them to travel with him to perform and record these unknown songs. During their travels, the haranistas meet Brian, a shy young man who for years has been secretly in love with a schoolmate. The haranistas, who have not serenaded in the last thirty years, offered their services to serenade Brian’s object of affection, resulting in one of the most tender moments of genuine harana captured on film. Word soon spread around Manila of leathery faced men whose style of untrained but sincere and expressive singing touch the hearts everywhere they performed, culminating in a series of triumphant live performances - from the small village to prestigious concert halls to recording the first authentic harana album in the last fifty years. But the question remains - can harana be restored to its former glory or is it doomed to vanish silently into the night as prevented by Benito Bautista. Healing and the mind with Bill Moyers Series - In Volume three the series examines two therapies involving neither drugs nor surgery, instead teaching patients to use their minds to improve the healing capacities within their bodies. Jon Kabat-Zinn teaches a form of Buddhist meditation to people from all walks of life, suffering from diverse medical problems, while David Spiegel runs a pioneering study seeking to demonstrate that group psychotherapy may prolong the lives of women in an advanced phase of breast cancer. The series Healing and the mind with Bill Moyers is a five volume exploration of the mind and body connection. Moyers talks with physicians, scientists, therapists, and patients-- people who are taking a new look at the meaning of sickness and health.

Health for Sale asks: are the world's largest drug companies, paradoxically, major obstacles to making a healthier world? The film focuses on Big Pharma, the ten largest pharmaceutical makers, who account for 500 billion dollars of world health spending a year and whose 205 billion dollars in pre-tax profits were more than the combined profits of the 490 other multinationals on the Fortune 500 companies. One key to the power of Big Pharma over the world drug market is the TRIPS agreement (Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights) negotiated by the World Trade Organization (WTO) between its 150 signatory nations. As a consequence, Big Pharma invests next to nothing to treat the diseases which afflict most of the world's population. 85% of all people die from five diseases, many specific to the poor countries of the Global South, but only 11% of health spending is on these plagues. Unless governments use their regulatory powers so that the public health sector can set the priorities for drug companies' pricing and product development, Big Pharma will continue to loot health services in the Global North and deprive billions in the Global South of critically needed treatments. World health is too precious to be treated as just another commodity. Directed by Michele Mellara, Alessandro Rossi. Language: English with English subtitles for other occasionally spoken languages.

An educated European immigrant struggles to overcome culture clash in his impoverished new surroundings by offering violin lessons in this heartwarming tale of community from filmmaker Joel Silberg. From the moment Hershele moved into his new home it was obvious that he didn't fit in. In addition to receiving comparatively luxurious permanent housing that stands in stark contrast to his neighbor's humble trailers, the classical music that fills the air in Hershele's home couldn't be more different from the Eastern rhythms that fill the air in his new neighborhood. In hopes of opening the lines of communication and better relating to his new neighbors, Hershele begins offering violin lessons to the local children. When the parents of Hershele's students discover their children's remarkable talent, the community bands together to form an orchestra that will bring not only a community, but an entire nation together. Conor Macleod was born in 1518 in the Highlands of Scotland. In 1536, after facing a mysterious, evil opponent, he survives a fatal stab wound and is banished from his village, for they believe his survival is the work of the Devil. Five years later, Macleod is met by Juan Sanchez Villa-Lobos Ramirez, a Spanish swordsman who teaches Macleod the awful truth; he is immortal, one of a race of many who can only die when the head is cut from the body. When one immortal takes the head of another, the loser’s power is absorbed into the winner. Ramirez teaches Macleod the ways of the sword, until Ramirez is tragically killed by Connor’s ultimate opponent, the evil Kurgan, a murderous immortal brute who lusts for enough power to rule the earth forever, known to immortals as ‘the Prize.’ Connor fights his way through the centuries, until the time of the Gathering, when the few immortals who have survived the endless battles come together to fight until only one remains, and that winner will receive ‘the Prize.’ The time: 1985. The place: New York City. The final fight is about to begin, and in the end, there can be only one. Cast includes Christopher Lambert, Roxanne Hart, Clancy Brown, Sean Connery. Song and additional music by Queen. Screenplay by Gregory Widen, Peter Bellwood, and Larry Ferguson. Directed by Russell Mulcahy. The American Experience Series - On September 6, 1970, members of the militant Palestinian group, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijacked four commercial airplanes. The group wanted to attract attention to the Palestinian cause. Three days later the PFLP commandeered a fifth plane. This dramatic, complicated story of the PFLP and the hijackings is an examination of how and when Middle East militants began to see civilians as legitimate pawns in their struggles for self-determination. The PFLP were not religious extremists, but secular Marxist Leninists, their actions with the hijackings began a new era of world terrorism. Those interviewed for this program include leaders of the PFLP, the militants who carried out the attacks, journalists who covered the hijackings, crew members, and passengers. An examination of how a radical fringe of the Republican Party has used the trauma of the 9/11 terror attacks to advance a pre-existing agenda to radically transform American foreign policy while rolling back civil liberties and social programs at home. The Bush Administrations false justifications for war in Iraq are placed within the larger context of a two-decade struggle by neo-conservatives to dramatically increase military spending in the wake of the Cold War, and to expand American power globally by means of force. The Administration has manipulated intelligence, political imagery, and the fears of the American people after 9/11 to sell its radical and controversial plan for aggressive American intervention to the nation. The documentary features interviews with leading commentators on the events of 9/11 and the war in Iraq. Narrated by Julian Bond. Written and directed by Jeremy Earp and Sut Jhally. A young woman living in a poor isolated town claims to have visions of the Blessed Mother. The news spreads and pilgrims and the afflicted flock to the town to be healed. The tourists, the sick, and the curious, provide a source of income for the town. The young woman and her friend are raped, her friend commits suicide, and the woman stops healing people and confesses the "miracles" she performs are a hoax. The rape results in a pregnancy. When her pregnancy is discovered it coincides with the end of a long drought, which the townspeople believed was a curse. Her pregnancy is believed to be the cause of the rain and the people view it as another miracle. Because of the circumstances of the pregnancy, the woman will not go along with another hoax and denies the existence of miracles. She is killed by an assassin's bullet. This film is set in the crumbling Argentine Hotel Termas, where a medical convention is being hosted. It poignantly captures the lives of two teenage girls, Amalia, the hotel owner’s daughter, and her best friend Josefina, as they adjust to their growing sexuality and religious passion. After an encounter with the respected Dr. Jano, a physician attending the convention, Amalia confides in Josefina that she is going to deliver him from sin. After submitting to her wishes, Dr. Jano realizes that no matter how good the temptation, nothing is worth the evil it causes.

One of the most important aspects of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict that has been overlooked is the plight of Christians in the Holy Land. Christians in the Palestinian territories have dropped from 15 percent of the Arab population in 1950 to just two percent today. This Christian exodus is a result of many factors, including the fighting between Israelis and Palestinians, but perhaps most significantly, the religious persecution these Christians encounter from their Muslim neighbors. Investigates the authenticity, cultural identity, and the articulation of modern Native American experience in cinematic language and pop culture. Set on the Grand Pine Indian Reservation, aka Reservation X, "Honey Moccasin" combines elements of melodrama, performance art, cable access, and whodunit to question conventions of ethnic and sexual identity as well as film narrative. A comedy/thriller complete with a fashion show and torchy musical numbers, this witty film employs a surreal pastiche of styles to depict the rivalry between bars The Smokin Moccasin and The Inukshuk Cafe, the saga of closeted drag queen/powwow clothing thief Zachary John, and the travails of crusading investigator Honey Moccasin. This irreverent reappropriation of familiar narrative strategies serves as a provocative spring-board for an investigation of authenticity, cultural identity, and the articulation of modern Native American experience in cinematic language and pop culture. Produced, directed & written by Shelly Niro. Language: English.

The Criterion Collection Series - A story about class divisions in Edwardian England, and the tragic series of events that occurs when two impulsive middle-class sisters become involved with a working class couple and a wealthy family. Margaret and Helen Schlegel are sisters from a well-educated European family. A series of events brings them into a relationship with the wealthy, very English Wilcox family. The younger sister, Helen, is rejected by the son of the wealthy family. The older sister, Meg, becomes a good friend to Ruth Wilcox, the wealthy mother of the son who rejected her sister. Ruth's most cherished possession is their cottage at Howard's End. She wishes fervently that Meg could live there, as they are kindred spirits. Over the course of years, Meg marries into the wealthy family, but the family tries to keep Meg from taking possession of Howards End. Both families also come into contact with Leonard Bast and his wife, a couple near the lowest tier of the rigid class system. Leonard's desire for cultural and intellectual status attracts the attention of Helen. Meg marries an independent spirit with her desire for companionship and a comfortable place in Edwardian society. Her moral strength is eventually able to resolve the tangle of opposites. The Human Language Series - In Part 3 of the "Human Language Series," discusses how we combine the miracle of syntax with what was inherited from our animal past - body language, hand gestures, and facial expressions. Seven facial expressions are shown that are universal among people everywhere. Demonstrates gender difference in how males and females talk to each other. The program discusses the "fall" of the human larynx and how it allowed humans to say syllables with new vowels that no other animal can, shows how gestures are analogical while speech is digital, and speculates on when human language evolved. Includes Noam Chomsky and George Carlin. Series produced, written, and directed by Gene Searchinger. A personal story about a pacific nation on the frontline of climate change. The central Pacific nation of Kiribati is one of the countries in the world most vulnerable to climate change. Sea level rise and increasing salinity are threatening the lives of 105,000 people spread over 33 atolls in this remote corner of the Pacific. It's the same ocean, which for generations has sustained the country that is now the source of its destruction. The latest prognosis for climate change appears grim. Pledges made by industrialized countries at the Copenhagen and Cancun Climate Change Conferences to cut carbon emissions have fallen far short of their targets. Scientists currently predict temperature increases of between 3 and 6 degrees, and sea level rises of well over a metre, by the turn of the century. Only decisive global action will save Kiribati and its culture from disappearing. Directed and produced by Tom Zubrycki. In English.

The Criterion Collection Series - Lena is a twenty-year-old young Swedish woman. She yearns to explore, learn, and understand the social and political conditions in 1960's Sweden. She becomes a political activist and concurrently undertakes a bold exploration of her own sexual identity. Upon its release in America, the film was seized by United States customs and was the subject of a Supreme Court battle, the film was banned in cities around the world. Director Sjoman uses an innovative stylistic approach deliberately blurring the lines between the characters' lives and those of the actors portraying them. Cast includes Lena Nyman, Borje Ahlstedt, Peter Lindgren, Chris Wahlstrom, Marie Goransson, Magnus Nilsson, Ulla Lytkens. Directed by Vilgot Sjoman. Bernard and Vivian Jaffe are a married couple who run an existential detective agency where they sift through the lives of their clients in order to discover the source of their angst. The Jaffes' latest client is Albert Markovski, an environmental activist who has built a very large rock and a great deal on his mind; their study of Albert's problems lead Bernard and Vivian to Brad Stand, a public relations executive with a chain of successful variety stores, Huckabees. While publicly allying himself with Albert's environmental initiatives, behind the scenes Brad is running roughshod over responsible land management with little care for the consequences. When Brad learns he's being watched by the Jaffes, he hopes to co-opt them by hiring them himself; however, the plan has unexpected consequences when their questioning leads Brad's girlfriend, well-scrubbed model Dawn, into reassessing her life and relationships. Meanwhile, Albert finds himself joining forces with Tommy, a firefighter and fellow environmentalist who has been having second thoughts about Bernard and Vivian's ideas and methods after a long-term investigation and has since fallen under the spell of nihilist poet and philosopher Cateva Vauba. This video catalogue, that marks the debut of the new audiovisual series from Reggio Children called VisionAria, narrates the project The Times of Time that involved children from the infant-toddler center to primary school. The project is carried out within the context of the important international photography festival Fotografia Europano 2008. Directed by Federico Fellini and Ennio Flaiano. The video catalogue is organized in three different sections: the catalogue of the exhibition The Times of Time, a short documentary on the project in the Reggio Emilia infant-toddler centers, preschools and primary schools, and the photographic ateliers held in the town. The video catalogue thus creates an intertwining between the learning experiences of the adults, the experimentation of the children, and the academic images, highlighting an approach to the visual language that is constructed in a context of many relationships. Environmentalism is often tied to hippies and new age feel good teachings. In the late-1990s a group of radical environmentalists formed in the Pacific Northwest and its members activities changed that image. The groups direct action which included arson lead to it be labeled ecoterrorist. The FBI called the group America's number one domestic terrorist threat.' The remarkable story of the rise and fall of the Earth Liberation Front is told through the transformation and radicalization of one of its members, Daniel McGowan. During the making of the film McGowan was facing life in prison for his participation in arson while a member of the group. The film details the activities of the ELF and the dramatic investigation of the events that led to McGowans involvement with the group. With never-before-seen archival footage and intimate interviews - with ELF members and with the prosecutor and detective who were chasing them the filmmakers ask hard questions about environmentalism, activism, and the way terrorism is defined. Written by Matthew Hamachek and Marshall Curry. Directed by Marshall Curry and Sam Cullman. "Eat food. Not too much. Mostly plants." These simple words go to the heart of food journalist Michael Pollan’s thesis. Humans used to know how to eat well, he argues, but the balanced dietary lessons that were once passed down through generations have been confused and distorted by food industry marketers, nutritional scientists, and journalists. As a result, we face today a complex culinary landscape dense with bad advice and foods that are not "real." Indeed, plain old eating is being replaced by an obsession with nutrition that is, paradoxically, ruining our health, not to mention our meals. Pollan’s advice is: "Don’t eat anything that your great-grandmother would not recognize as food." Looking at what science does and does not know about diet and health, he proposes a new way to think about food." Dalits, the Untouchables, occupy the lowest place in the Hindu caste system. In India it has been made illegal to discriminate against Dalits, still they are targets of systematic discrimination. There are 260,000 million Dalits, which makes caste discrimination a major human rights issue. The film describes several examples of caste discrimination and discusses the landlord-sponsored militia, Ranbir Sena’s Army which attacked agricultural laborers and their families, all Dalits. The Ranbir Sena declared they would target Dalits until they cease their agitation for better pay and land, and repudiate the Naxalites, Maoist armed-activists who defend Dalits from landlord violence.

Subtitled "Love knows no borders" this documentary film about the real people at the heart of the United States' immigration debate. Renata, Evelyn, and Antonio were young children when their parents brought them to the U.S. in search of a better life; they were teenagers when their mothers, fathers, and siblings were deported. Today, they are known as Dreamers. Indivisible takes place at a pivotal moment in their lives, as they fight for a pathway to citizenship and a chance to be reunited with their loved ones. Frustrated with the stalled legislative process, the trio take matters into their own hands and petition for a special waiver that would allow them to leave the U.S to visit their families–and legally return. With the future of immigration reform

Infinite space : the architecture of John Lautner : (DVD)

COLOR  ENHANCE TV  2010
The lifelong quest of visionary architect John Lautner was to create timeless, free joyous space for all of life’s activities. This film traces his brilliance and how he created the most sensual architecture of the 20th century. Born in 1911, Lautner broke from his mentor, Frank Lloyd Wright, as a young man and went west to California to forge his own unique style. In a life marked by innovation and inspiration, he had endless battles with building codes, made an accidental leap into the epicentre of pop culture, experienced bitterness at lost opportunities and finally, monumental achievement. He was idolised by young modernists, criticised by academics and beloved by his clients who worked side by side with him to build their houses.
Renowned architectural filmmaker Murray Grigor explores Lautner’s dramatic spaces and commentary comes from Lautner himself, taken from recordings in archives. Other comments come from Frank Gehry and his peers who were influenced by Lautner, and emotional memories of original clients, builders and owners. The special features on this DVD include: Architect/author Frank Escher comments on eight spatial portraits of This essay film from renowned filmmaker and media theorist Harun Farocki meditates on the rhetoric of film and video editing. The film developed out of Farocki's installation about his work, Using clips from his past documentary work, Farocki explores the relationship between the editor and the images he or she manipulates. It examines the question of what it means to work with existing images rather than producing one's own, new images. The editor, whose work has become essential to the Information Age, is a powerful figure with a strong ethical relationship to the images, sounds, and, eventually, ideology that they help produce. The title refers both to Farocki's workplace, the editing table, as well as the "human-machine interface", where a person operates a computer using a keyboard and a mouse. In 1971, Simi Linton was injured while hitchhiking to Washington to protest the war in Vietnam. Suddenly a young disabled college student, she confronted insidious forms of discrimination she couldn’t have imagined before. Over time she joined forces with a vibrant disability community, and realized that political engagement, love, and dance could once again be central to her life. Rock n’ Roll, dancing, and sexuality liberated Simi from the shame she felt as a young disabled woman. Invitation to dance traces Simi’s first reluctant foray onto the dance floor at a party to present day when dance has become a central theme in her social life, activism, and work. Ultimately, the film is a never-before-told coming out story of disabled people staking their claim to "equality, justice, and a place on the dance floor!"

In 1997, Mohammad Khatami was elected president of Iran as a moderate reform candidate with promises of bringing some measures of freedom to the Islamic Republic of Iran. This film analyzes the complex climate of the Iranian Political system, which saw Khatami’s eight years in office reduced to a Lame Duck presidency. Little reform was accomplished while the general public called for reforms and greater freedom and powerful Supreme spiritual leader of Iran, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei held a hardline stance against reforms. The president was unable to overcome the powerful political forces opposing him in Tehran which rendered him ineffective. After decades of oppressive and authoritarian rein, there wasn’t a democratic political process in place to bring about change through peaceful means and struggle. Frontline Series - An episode of Frontline that examines the importation of Chinese goods into the United States by the Wal-Mart Corporation. Wal-Mart's giant discount stores operate across the United States. For many Americans Wal-Mart stores are the only option to purchase a wide array of products at a reasonable price. Wal-Mart stores are stocked with many products produced in China. For Wal-Mart, China has become the cheapest, most reliable production platform in the world, the source of up to $25 billion in annual imports that help the company deliver everyday low prices to 100 million customers a week. Some economists credit Wal-Mart's single-minded focus on low costs with helping contain U.S. inflation, while others charge the company with being the main force in driving the massive overseas shift to China in the production of American consumer goods, resulting in hundreds of thousands of lost jobs and a lower standard of living in the United States. This is the dramatic and violent story of Italian fascism from 1919 to 1946. Benito Mussolini and his Blackshirts seized power through systematic intimidation, violence, and murder; they were supported by the Italian Monarchy, the Vatican, and some world leaders. This two-part film uses an extensive array of archival material, including letters, diary entries, newspaper accounts, secret memos, and expert interviews combined with rare archival film and photographs. Among the revelations told for the first time is the role of a strong Jewish wing of Mussolini's fascist movement and how that wing was sold out when Il Duce climbed into bed with Nazi Germany. Italian fascism in color is a two-part program that follows the birth of fascism after World War I to its full flowering in the mid-1930s. Ivan the terrible part II : (DVD) 09716,ID
COLOR 85 MIN IMAGE ENTE 1946
Part II of Director Sergei Eisenstein's epic chronicle of the 16th Century Tsar. This second film in the planned trilogy focuses less on the character of Ivan, his relationship to his people, and his plight against his enemies on a politically significant level. Instead its concern is on the dramatics of his power struggle against the Boyars (the Russian Feudal nobility). The scenario is crammed with intrigue: Ivan seeks the support of his various friends and colleagues, and there are family jealousies, an assassination plot, executions and murders. Ivan is not so much an historical figure as a player in a grand palace melodrama. While Part I won awards from the government, Part II was commenced to film "Ivan the Terrible," a planned trilogy, he was a decade after the filmmaker had died. The film stars Nikolai Cherkassov and features a score by Sergei Prokofiev. The film is shot in black and white, but the director was able to shoot a few sequences in color. In Russian, with English subtitles.

An irreverent comedy that follows the further adventures of Jay and Silent Bob, characters first introduced in director Kevin Smith's classic low budget film "Clerks." The film is packed with low brow humor, "Star War" references, and cameos by stars from other Smith films. The movie features several wacky storylines. The pair discovers a major motion picture is being developed about their characters without their consent or input.
The two marijuana smoking buddies decide to leave their native
New Jersey and head to Hollywood to stop the production.
Along the way they become involved with a group of sexy crooks masquerading as an animal liberation group and the heroes run afoul of the law. Cast includes Kevin Smith, Jason Mewes, Ben Affleck, Eliza Dushku, Shannon Elizabeth, Will Ferrell, Ali Larzer, Jason Lee, Chris Rock. Written and directed by Kevin Smith.
This two-disc DVD version of the film features 176 minutes of

JAZZ, episode ten : a masterpiece by midnight : (DVD) 08570.ID
COLOR 120 MIN PBS VIDEO 2001
JAZZ SERIES - By the early 1960's, jazz is in trouble. Young people now overwhelmingly prefer rock 'n Roll – though Louis Armstrong manages to outsell the Beatles with "Hello Dolly" and Stan Getz helps boost a craze for Bossa Nova. Desperate for work, some musicians go into exile overseas, including the tenor saxophone master, Dexter Gordon. Critics divide the music into antagonistic "schools" – Dixieland, swing, bebop, hard bop, modal, Free, avant-garde, and more. Many musicians mix music with social protest, including Max Roach, Charles Mingus, Archie Schepp, and the Art Ensemble of Chicago. John Coltrane dies young and Louis Armstrong and Duke Ellington pass away during the seventies. Miles Davis creates the enormously popular music called Fusion. A new generation of musicians, led by trumpeter Wynton Marsalis, emerges, eager to express themselves within the music's great traditions. Narrated by Keith David. Written by Geoffrey C. Ward. B&W 10 MIN NATIONAL C 1939
A short travelogue produced in 1939 on Lwow, Poland also known as Lemberg, an old well-established Jewish community. It is now known as Ivov in the Ukraine, but at the time it was the second city of Lwow. Jews made up one third of the population. It was a prosperous community with parks, pavilions, and busy streets. The short captures such landmarks of the Jewish community as Yad Haruzim Trade Union Building, the old ghetto, the exterior of the Modern Temple and the orthodox school, Lazarus Hospital, the grave of the "Golden Rose." The life and spirit of the community captured on the film would soon be obliterated by the Nazis after Germany invaded and occupied Poland in 1939. One of six short travelogues produced by the Warsaw based production company Sektors Films in 1938 and 1939 about urban Jewish communities in Poland. Text and narration by Asher Lerner. In Yiddish, with English subtitles.

The 85-year-old Jiro Ono is considered by many to be the world's greatest sushi chef. For most of his life, Jiro has been perfecting the art of making sushi. He works from sunrise to well beyond sunset to taste every piece of fish; meticulously train his employees; and carefully mold and finesse the impeccable presentation of each sushi creation. He is the proprietor of a 10-seat sushi-only restaurant inauspiciously located in a Tokyo subway station. Despite its humble appearances, it is the first restaurant of its kind to be awarded a prestigious 3-star Michelin review, making Jiro the oldest Michelin chef alive. Sushi lovers from around the globe make repeated pilgrimages, calling months in advance and shelling out top dollar for a coveted seat at Jiro's sushi bar. The film chronicles Jiro's life as both an unparalleled success in the culinary world, and as a loving yet complicated father of two. Kamakha through prayerful eyes : (DVD)

This film captures the complexity and mystery surrounding Kamakha Temple, an ancient place of fertility worship in India’s northeastern state of Assam. This temple is unique among Hindu temples of the Devi (the Goddess) in that it enshrines no image of Her. Fertility worship at Kamakha dates back to ancient times when the temple complex was a conglomeration of large rocks used by the matriarchal tribes: the Khasis and Garos of Assam. During the late 19th and early 20th centuries, the temple was assimilated into mainstream Hindu culture. After a portrait of everyday proceedings at the temple, the film moves to two artists who live in its vicinity, depicting their creative motivations, how the Goddess inspires them, and how they give Her form. The film follows the artistic methods they practice on a daily basis and shows how their creations sit within the broader social community surrounding the temple. The film combines observational and reflexive methods to explore how devotees of different socio-cultural backgrounds and aesthetic persuasions imagine and give form to the Goddess who exceeds visual representation. A film by Aparna Sharma. In English.

"Kaminey" is a story about a pair of twins Charlie and Guddu who can't stand the sight of each other. They are as different as chalk and cheese, Charlie lisps while Guddu stammers. One fateful rainy night, their carefully separated lives cross paths.
Charlie gets mixed up in a deadly get-rich-quick scheme, while Guddu realizes that the love of his life, Sweety, has unwittingly paid a price on his head. Its a dark comic ride here onwards, as the brothers are sucked into a world of drugs, guns and money.
Their lives collide head on with gangsters, rebel soldiers, rogue politicians and crooked cops. In the middle of this crazy adventure, the brothers have to run to protect themselves, their dreams and their love. And most importantly, they realize that all they have is each other. The cast includes Shahid

Divided into 13 mini-stories, this is the story of Ertan Ongun, a 25-year-old Turk living in Kiel, in Germany. His parents own a snack stand, but his real family has been the local Turkish gangs. His life, like those of his friends, is characterized by the daily fight for respect and acceptance, growing up in a country he can never call home. Since the age of 15, he has led the life of a petty crook: theft, fights, drugs, police, in short, the hard-edged world of the red light district. His ambition is to become a larger player in the narcotics trade. In spite of it all, he maintains a sense of humor as he tries to make the best of things as a tough guy, with his own brand of charm. After prostitute Yonca's boyfriend is killed, and his tip leads to his downfall, she turns to their old friend Ertan for help. For Ertan and his pals, Kemal

Inspired by a true story, this is an epic tale of an Afghan-born Canadian journalist who returns to her homeland to stop her sister from committing suicide. Nafas learns that her sister is depressed after being forced by a landmine and living under the Taliban's systemic oppression of women and has vowed to commit suicide at the time of the next solar eclipse, which is only three days away. The journalist begins her journey to save her sister, clothed in the traditional head-to-toe burka and posing as a subservient wife, sets out on her odyssey across a dramatic desert landscape. She encounters bandits, corpse-robbers, marooned exiles, overwhelmed Red Cross workers, hordes of land-

"Kino-eye" (1924, 78 min): A collection of excerpts from newsreels and documentary films of Soviet life in the early 1920s made by Dziga Vertov and his "Kino-Eye" group. Highlighted are the activities of Soviet children and youth of the Young Pioneers and Young Leninists interwoven with cinematic experiments as when Vertov charts the evolution of hamburger and bread by following its trail back to the farms and wheat fields from whence it came. An honest documentary of a society fresh from revolution, buoyed by idealism. The final reel no longer exists but has been approximated through use of carefully selected outtake footage. "Three songs about Lenin" (1934, 59 min): Lenin as revealed through the eyes of the Russian people, represented by three songs. The first, "My face was a dark prison," concerns the life of a young Muslim woman. "We loved him" deals with Lenin's life and death. The third song, "In a big city of stone," shows the accomplishments of his rule. Both films directed by Dziga Vertov. Language: Silent films with Russian subtitles.

The Korean War: Fire and Ice Series - The first part of a four part series about the military history of the Korean War. With the U.N. forces on the verge of being pushed into the sea at Pusan, victory was within the grasp of the surrounding North Korean army, but General Douglas MacArthur executed a high-risk amphibious landing at Inchon. Within months, MacArthur's men would drive the North Koreans almost to the Chinese border. The victory would turn to devastating defeat, as a huge wave of Chinese troops took the U.N. contingent by surprise, forcing a retreat back into South Korea. The four part series is an all-encompassing documentary exploring the 3-year conflict that took more than 2 million lives. The Korean War set all the rules for East/West superpower conflict in the nuclear age, while bringing the world closer to all-out atomic war than has ever been told. Written by Joseph Alexander, Norman Stahl, and Rod Paschall. Narrated by Edward Herrmann.

The Korean War: Fire and Ice Series - The third part of a four part series about the military history of the Korean War. Nearly overrun by the hordes of Chinese troops pouring across the Yalu River, American forces experienced defeat at the Chosin Reservoir and the evacuation of forces from the port of Hungnam. By December of 1950, the communists had recaptured the North Korean capital, Pynongyang; a month later, the southern capital of Seoul also fell. Now, with the war becoming increasingly costly for both sides, the two adversaries dug in and consolidated their forces at the 38th Parallel. The four part series is an all-encompassing documentary exploring the 3-year conflict that took more than 2 million lives. The Korean War set all the rules for East/West superpower conflict in the nuclear age, while bringing the world closer to all-out atomic war than has ever been told. Written by Joseph Alexander, Norman Stahl, and Rod Paschall. Narrated by Edward Herrmann.

The Korean War: Fire and Ice Series - The fourth and final part of the four part series about the military history of the Korean War. As American casualties mounted, U.S. President Harry Truman came under increasing military and political pressure finally resulting in MacArthur’s dismissal and the arrival of General Matthew Ridgway. After retaking Seoul the U.N. forces confronted the re-grouped enemy in the biggest battle of the war. But by now, U.S. policy had shifted from liberation to containing the communists at the 38th parallel. The four part series is an all- encompassing documentary exploring the 3-year conflict that took more than 2 million lives. The Korean War set all the rules for East/West superpower conflict in the nuclear age, while bringing the world closer to all-out atomic war than has...

This exploration of love and marriage in South Korea looks closely at ancient and present-day rituals, revealing what is old in the new and new in the old. Ottinger’s inquiry leads us from shamanism, tempura toasts, to the enchanted maze of 21st-century Seoul, where vendors of medicinal herbs co-exist with high-tech beauty salons for wedding couples and secular marriage palaces. Using film much like a canvas, filmmaker Ulrike Ottinger creates a modern fairytale flush with mythological heroes, rite, ancestral symbolism, dreams of eternal love, and a whole lot of Western kitsch. Participants include Kim KeumHwa (Shamaness), Yun Minkyung (bride), Yoo Heejong (groom), Lee Hyaekeyoung (mother of the bride), Yang Gilsung (father of the bride). English narration by Laurence A. Rickels. A Film by Ulrike Ottinger. In English, with German and Korean subtitles.

The Bishop of Iceland dispatches a young emissary to investigate certain charges against the pastor at Snaefells Glacier, who, among other things, appears to have given up burying the dead. But once he arrives, the emissary finds that this dereliction counts only as a mild eccentricity in a community that regards itself as the center of the world and where Creation itself is a work in progress. What is the emissary to make, for example, of the boarded-up church? What about the mysterious building that has sprung up alongside it? Or if the Pastor Primus spends most of his time shoeing horses? Or is his wife, a pronoun ooh-a, which is what men invariably sputter upon seeing her), is rumored never to have bathed, eaten, or slept? Piling improbability on top of improbability, the film overflows with comedy both wild and deadpan as it conjures a beguiling and profound phantasmagoria. Based on the novel by Halldor Laxness. Laila, 1929's epically scaled Norwegian feature comes from Danish-German director and noted cinematographer George Schneevoigt, who brings every exotic corner of on-location Scandinavia to the forefront in a decades-spanning romantic adventure... Mona Martenson is Laila, a young girl separated from her parents as a baby and raised by a wealthy reindeer owner Asлаг (Peter Malberg) in the frozen tundra. Though she is returned a year later, Laila grows into a young woman of two worlds, at home with both her settled and nomadic upbringings. Laila soon finds herself in a love triangle with her foster brother Mellet (Henry Gleditsch) and her cousin Anders (Harald Schwenzen), played out against the backdrop of an encroaching plague. Expertly photographed with a shockingly modern cinematic flair, Laila goes from snowy mountain-tops to lush green valleys, featuring treacherous waterfalls, packs of rampaging wolves and reindeer-pulled sled chases. Cast includes Peter Malberg, Cally Monrad, Henry Gleditsch, Trygve Larssen, Mona Martenson, Harald Schwenzen. Extras include essay by film historian Casper Tyberg; diary manuscript of actor Trygve Larssen; photographs; biographies. Directed by George Schneevoigt. BAHAR IMAJ 2006

A documentary looking back at the population exchange between Turkey and Greece between 1922 and 1924; the first large scale population exchange, or agreed mutual expulsion, in the 20th century. It involved some two million persons, and was large scale population exchange, or agreed mutual expulsion, in between Turkey and Greece between 1922 and 1924; the first population exchange. In a series of colorful narratives, subjects in the film retrace the steps of their grandparents' historic uprooting from Greece to resettlement in Turkey. The film is also sympathetic to the plight of the Greeks who were forced to leave Guzelyurt, which remains to this day home to spectacular Christian Orthodox churches, to establish a new home for themselves in Greece, a country that was foreign to them. The film also documents a recent development: the peoples of Guzelyurt, Turkey and Kavala, Greece have begun to visit each other, forming new and lasting bonds, despite the tragic events that took place two generations ago. A burial hymn that was brought to America by African slaves more than two hundred years ago, is traced back to its roots in Africa. The Mende song was still remembered in a remote village in Sierra Leone, by an old woman who had heard it from her grandmother who made the remarkable prediction that this song would help her recognize long-lost kinfolk. The survival of the song in America illustrates how African Americans were able to retain links with their African past through the horrors of the middle passage, slavery, and segregation. The film concludes with a moving homecoming of the Gullah family, which had preserved the song in America to the Mende villagers who reenact the ancient burial ritual for them. An old Berlin hotel doorman owes his popularity to his Franz-Joseph whiskers and his twin talents of saluting and heaving luggage. When the management observes that he is no longer as strong as he once was, he is demoted to lavatory attendant, but he has the final victory. A revelation in the art of the motion picture, as not one title is used; the story is told exclusively through picture progression. Featuring Emil Jannings. Music composed and conducted by Zach Brock and performed by the Olympia Chamber Orchestra. Directed by F.W. Murnau. Based on Hur Young-Man’s best-selling comic book series “Silk Gaek”, the movie, “Le grand chef”, revolves around the rivalry between two men as they battle it out for the title of best chef in the nation. Five years ago, Sung-Chan witnessed the end of his culinary career. A naturally gifted chef who puts his whole heart into his creations, Sung-Chan enters a prestigious cooking competition and meets a tough challenger, an ambitious, conniving chef Bong-Joo. The last assignment, blowfish sashimi, prepared by the two contestants appears identical from every angle. But upon sampling Sung-Chan’s blowfish, the judges are poisoned, leaving Sung-Chan bewildered and devastated as his rival claims the crown. Five years later, destiny brings the rivalry back in play. Sung-Chan, who gave up cooking after the disgraceful incident, is convinced by hot-blooded VJ Jin-Soo to enter the grand culinary competition to name the true heir to the last royal chef of the Joseon era. Now, the stake is even higher and sure enough, nemesis Bong-Joo rolls out his dirty tricks.

This film is about the members of an ordinary, modern Italian family, in love, at work, at one another’s sides and on one another’s nerves. The lives of the two brothers at the center of the story, Matteo and Nicola, tell a tale of youthful baby-boomer idealism, rebelliousness, and disillusionment, followed by the mellowing of middle age. Qualified as a doctor, Nicola embodies ’60s rebelliousness, Sung-Chan becomes a soldier, then a policeman and detective. Their lives unfold as threads in the larger historical tapestry, wherein events such as the Florence floods of 1966, workers’ uprisings in Turin a few years later, the Red Brigades terrorism of the 1970s, and the Mafia trials of the 1990s occur and affect them. Though their lives follow wildly divergent paths the brothers remain close, and their decisions figure strongly in determining each other’s futures. The film presents a fascinating study of the ways in which people continue to grow after they have become adults. The cast includes Adriana Asti, Sonia Bergamasco, Fabrizio Gifuni, Andrea Tidona. Directed by Marco Tulio Giordana. The special features on this DVD includes: Interview with Marco Tulio Giordana, Interview with Jasmine Trinca; Biographical notes on cast and crew. This film is about the members of an ordinary, modern Italian family, in love, at work, at one another’s sides and on one another’s nerves. The lives of the two brothers at the center of the story, Matteo and Nicola, tell a tale of youthful baby-boomer idealism, rebelliousness, and disillusionment, followed by the mellowing of middle age. Qualified as a doctor, Nicola embodies ’60s rebelliousness, Sung-Chan becomes a soldier, then a policeman and detective. Their lives unfold as threads in the larger historical tapestry, wherein events such as the Florence floods of 1966, workers’ uprisings in Turin a few years later, the Red Brigades terrorism of the 1970s, and the Mafia trials of the 1990s occur and affect them. Though their lives follow wildly divergent paths the brothers remain close, and their decisions figure strongly in determining each other’s futures. The film presents a fascinating study of the ways in which people continue to grow after they have become adults. The cast includes Adriana Asti, Sonia Bergamasco, Fabrizio Gifuni, Andrea Tidona. Directed by Marco Tulio Giordana. The special features on this DVD includes: Interview with Marco Tulio Giordana, Interview with Jasmine Trinca; Biographical notes on cast and crew. During the Bush administration the Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) organization opened the T. Don Hutto Residential Center a prototype family detention facility in May 2006. The controversial American immigration policy of family detention was put into effect. A former medium-security prison operated by CCA, the largest private prison operator in the country, the facility housed immigrant children and their parents from all over the world awaiting asylum hearings or deportation proceedings. The facility was activated with little media attention or public knowledge. Soon lawyers of detainees became aware of the conditions the immigrants were housed and worked to bring attention to the facility and through lawsuits and community activism bringing about change. The film explores the government rationale for family detention, conditions at the facility, collateral damage, and the role of community activism in bringing change. A film by Clark Lyda and Jesse Lyda.

Leaving home: Most of India's 1.2 billion people live in villages. This documentary is about one of these villages, 100 miles north of Delhi, and focuses on the coming-of-age of Renu, a rural north India teenager. Can she fulfill her dreams and become a teacher and live in the big city? The film is about women's rights, rural life, India, castes, untouchables, marriage, weddings, family, motherhood, fatherhood, tradition and change. The film features American anthropologist J. Michael Mahler who has traced Renu’s village move from 18th century conditions to the 20th century. Nishu Varma, a journalist, who also acts as the filmmaker’s interpreter arranges to talk to women from the village away from any men, which produces conversations about sex, abuse, dowry, and other traditions. Featuring Michael Mahler and Nishu Varma. Written and directed by Robert Richter. In English and Hindi, with English subtitles.

 Liberia : a fragile peace : (DVD) 15926,ID
COLOR 60 MIN CALIFORNIA 2005 Liberia: A Fragile Peace, tells the story of a war weary peoples struggle to rebuild their nation. After fourteen years of civil war fought in large part by children, the bloodshed finally spilled onto the streets of Monrovia, the capital city, in the summer of 2003. The world finally took notice of the once prosperous country now reduced to ruins at the hands of dictator Charles Taylor and his enemies. With Taylor in exile and 15,000 UN peacekeepers on the ground, this timely film goes behind the headlines to explore what really happened to this nation founded by former slaves, and to realistically appraise the hopes and fears about what may happen there next. Liberia: A Fragile Peace chronicles the period from the departure of Charles Taylor to the election of Ellen Johnson-Sirleaf, the first African woman head of state, and presents the difficulties of rehabilitating a nation destroyed by war. As one Liberian so eloquently stated in the film, We have an historical opportunity to recreate our state, and thats not something most people have in their lifetime. Directed by Steven Flanz.

An in-depth case study of Liberia's brutal civil war. The war is given historical context stretching back nearly two hundred years and war-time journalism brings the harrowing aspects of the conflict as it took place, from ricocheting bullets to children soldiers. A reporter is besieged in the Liberian capital with President Charles Taylor, who pledges not to leave until peacekeepers are in place. Another reporter is "embedded" with the Liberians United for Reconciliation and Democracy, who pledge to pillage the country until President Taylor leaves. When peacekeepers from Nigeria and the United Nations finally do arrive, the empty promises of the United States to provide aid to Liberia during the darkest days of the civil war are glaring. Directed by Jonathan Stack.

The Pridelands are a small slice of heaven, ruled by Mufasa, the Lion King. His son Simba is preoccupied with life and all its potential, and neglects the lessons Mufasa tries to impart. Scar, Mufasa's brother has lived his adult in the shadow of his better looking, more successful, universally adored sibling. Capitalizing upon Simba's youthful exuberance and reckless abandon, Scar manipulates his nephew into playing the key role in his ascension to power, and believing himself guilty of Mufasa's death. Simba flees from his home and family in shame and disgrace, never to return. Years of abuse and neglect under King Scar begin, and the Pridelands are devastated, and lionesses are hunting far outside their boundaries. One such is Nala, who discovers the exiled Simba, who must face the ghosts and demons of his past to save the ones he loves. A video collage highlighting "Hollywood's favorite role for black women" – the maid. By assembling clips from the 1930's to present-day the video illustrates the narrow margin Hollywood has allowed African American actresses to perform. Still, the performers have been able to rise above their limited roles and stand out – even stealing the scene from the white stars. The collection of clips highlights how black characters and white characters still interact on screen, under Hollywood's eternally backwards eye. A film collaboration between Tracey Moffatt and Gary Hillberg.

Robert Altman successfully transports Philip Marlowe, incarnated by Elliott Gould, to the over-privileged, full-color 70s. Marlowe is lonely and shabby, yet does not seem an anachronism in the contemporary world. Unlike Bogart's Marlowe, this is not an especially tough Marlowe. He's a bright, conscientiously solemn nut, a guy who hopes for the best but expects the worst. This particular Philip Marlowe, despite evidence to the contrary, persists in believing that not all relationships need be opportunistic or squalid. This documentary looks past the image of Los Angeles presented on television shows and Hollywood films to create a fresh and candid portrait of America’s second largest city following the close of its “Anglo century” (1900-2000). A look at a city where more than half of the population is Latino and 40 percent are foreign born, the film uses a groundbreaking high-definition format to explore challenging questions and provocative points of view. How will the city’s new Latino and Asian majorities work with other ethnic groups to create a cultural consensus? What is the future of L.A.’s unprecedented multiculturalism–will the city’s many neighborhoods balkanize, or coalesce? And despite earthquakes and a seemingly insatiable desire to destroy and rebuild, can the city retain a sense of history? A documentary by Phillip Rodriguez.

Lost boys of Sudan

Two teenage Sudanese refugees, orphaned by their war torn country, are followed on their journey from Africa to America. In the late 80’s Islamic fundamentalists in Sudan waged war on the country’s separatists, leaving behind over 20,000 male orphans, who were called “lost boys.” Those who survived the ordeal were placed in refugee camps, and some of those boys were chosen for a resettlement program in America. In America the boys are safe from physical harm, but experience extreme cultural differences. Their life in Sudan could not prepare them for the abundance of American society or the alienation of contemporary American life. A film documenting the plight of women working in the flower industry in Colombia. Carnations are easily purchased in the United States and sixty percent of all flowers sold in the United States are imported from Colombia. The film provides a detailed examination of the production of carnations for the world flower market and the exploitative conditions the labor experience. The growers use pesticides and fungicides, some of which have been banned in most developed countries. The carnation crop is described from a business point of view and then from the worker's perspective. The film features testimonies of a Colombian woman about the hazardous labor conditions they work under and shows their efforts to organize. The women are poorly paid and treated like slaves, and many become sick and diseased. A film by Marta Rodriguez and Jorge Silva. In Spanish, with English subtitles.

AK 100 : Criterion Akira Kurosawa collection Series - Jean Renoir and Akira Kurosawa, two of cinema's greatest directors, transform Maxim Gorky's classic proletarian play "The Lower Depths" in their own ways for their own times. Renoir, working amidst the rise of Hitler and the Popular Front in France, had managed to take license with the dark nature of Gorky's source material, softening its bleak outlook. Kurosawa, firmly situated in the postwar world, found little reason for hope. He remained faithful to the original with its focus on the conflict between illusion and reality, a theme he would return to over and over again. Working with their most celebrated actors (Gabin with Mifune with Kurosawa), each film offers a unique look at cinematic adaptation - where social conditions and filmmaking styles converge to create unique masterpieces. A Brazilian comedy based on a novel by Mario de Andrade. The story is a parable in which the main protagonist Macunaíma represents the three Brazilian races, white, black, and the original natives of Brazil. Macunaíma is born black to an elderly native woman in the Brazilian jungle as a fully grown man, but with the innocence and naivety of a child. Later he is turned white by a magical spring and leaves the jungle for the city. He has much to learn about living in the big city and he meets and... has a black child with a political terrorist opposed to the military rule in the country. Based on the novel by Mario de Andrade. Cast includes Grande Otelo, Paulo Jose, Jardel Filho, Dina Stat, Milton Goncalves, Rodolfo Arena, Joana Fomm. Written and directed by Joaquim Pedro de Andrade. This DVD version features a satirical comedy. "Macunaima" is a black native from the forests of Brazil in this satirical comedy. When he bathes in a magic stream, he is turned into a white man. He goes into town and becomes the lover of a female revolutionary. She is killed by her own time bomb and her good-luck charm is found by an Italian. The man becomes a millionaire. Macunaima goes to visit the lucky man and almost ends up on the menu. He returns to the jungle where he is abandoned by his followers and family for lying about food. The once-fortunate man sits alone as he tells his story to the only creature who will listen, a parrot. The cast includes Grande Otelo, Paulo Jose, Jardel Filho. Directed by Joaquim Pedro de Andrade. Bonus features include an introduction to the film by Joaquim Pedro de Andrade; Interview with Heloisa Buarque de Hollanda; The restoration of "Macunaima"; 2 short films by Joaquim Pedro de Andrade: "Cinema Novo" and "Peau de Chat." Canadian filmmakers chronicle the violent history of Guatemala and the life of Wenceslao Arirma, an ‘ordinary’ Mayan from the highlands of Guatemala. He was a farmer, teacher, guerilla, priest, champion of human rights, and father. His two children were murdered by death squads. Arirma’s, known as Juan Carlos, very personal story is followed for over two decades and raises difficult questions about human rights, social justice, and how individuals choose to make a difference in the world. The relationship between the filmmakers’ and Arirma and the tragic events in his life lead the filmmakers to question their own responsibility as ‘objective’ journalists who bear witness at somebody else’s cost. The crippled frontier Series - Set in Manipur the film seeks to foreground a state that exists on the periphery of the Indian imagination. As with other North Eastern states, culturally and ethnically Manipur has remained estranged from the dominant Indian culture and has repeatedly sought to assert its identity through insurgency. In 1980-81 the Indian state countered by giving unprecedented powers to its army to deal with insurgency. The 'Armed Forces Special Powers Act' (AFSPA), gives complete immunity to the army and led to killings and rapes. The situation got so bad that in August 2004 a group of women disrobed in giving unprecedented powers to its army to deal with insurgency. A documentary film that explains where all the bead necklaces that are exchanged between New Orleans Mardi Gras revelers are produced. The beads, now used in carnivals and celebrations all over America, purchased at chain stores, and given away during carnivals, parades, and celebrations, often accompanied by the exposing of breasts by women and a lot of alcoholic consumption, have global implications. The filmmaker follows the “bead trail” from a factory in China to Bourbon Street, exposing the inequalities of globalization, by juxtaposing American excess and consumer ignorance against the harsh life of the Chinese factory workers. He tries to get the Mardi Gras participants to think about where the beads are made under punishing conditions and to let the factory workers know where the product they make ends up; many of the factory workers admit to wondering what becomes of the garish necklaces.

Abramovic reenacted five seminal performance works by her peers, dating from the 1960’s and 70’s, and two of her own, interpreting them as one would a musical score. The project confronted the fact that little documentation exists from this critical early period and one often has to rely upon testimony from witnesses or photographs that show only portions of any given performance. The seven works were performed for seven hours each, over the course of seven consecutive days. ‘Seven

Marlene Dietrich: the Glamour Collection

A film portrait of actress Marlene Dietrich. When the uncooperative screen legend refused to let herself be filmed, director and former Dietrich co-star Maximilian Schell, used the over 40 hours of sound recordings to produce a portrait of the aging reclusive star discussing topics from her childhood to her marriage, collaborators, life, death, and the Holocaust. Her words are set to the stunning film images of the young Marlene and combined with self-reflexive making-of footage and an impressionistic re-creation of the sunless Paris flat where Schell audio taped the star. The Mask You Live In follows boys and young men as they struggle to stay true to themselves while negotiating America’s narrow definition of masculinity. Pressured by the media, their peer group, and even the adults in their lives, our protagonists confront messages encouraging them to disconnect from their emotions, devalue authentic friendships, objectify and degrade women, and resolve conflicts through violence. These gender stereotypes interconnect with race, class, and circumstance, creating a maze of identity issues boys and young men must navigate to become ‘real’ men. Experts in neuroscience, psychology, sociology, sports, education, and media also weigh in, offering empirical evidence of the ‘boy crisis’ and tactics to combat it. The Mask You Live In ultimately illustrates how we, as a society, can raise a healthier generation of boys and young men. Participants: Joe Ehrmann, Judy Y. Chu (Ed.D), Terry Kimmel (Ph.D.), Gabbiella Sarlo, Caroline Heldman (Ph.D.), Terry A. Kupers (M.D.) and many others; Youth, Justin, Jack, Gabe, and many others. Directed by Jennifer Siebel Newsom. Matto Grosso: the great Brazilian wilderness: (DVD)

In 1930 an odd assortment of scientists and adventurers struck out from New York for the Mato Grosso region of Brazil, with the stated purpose of creating the first documentary film to be made in the field with live sound recording equipment. Some of the resulting footage is seen in this newly restored set, including the expeditionary film "Matto Grosso, the Great Brazilian Wilderness," a 1931-style staged documentary which takes place in what we now think was the village of Pogubu Coreu, with the collaboration of the Sao Lourenco Bororo people. Directed by Floyd Crosby. In a second short film, The hoax, a young boy out for his first hunt tries to put over on his elders. A resemblance to the Robert Flaherty film Nanook of the North may be noted here, the director Floyd Crosby had just returned from working with Robert Flaherty in the South Pacific. Journalist and filmmaker Zarqa Nawaz visits mosques throughout Canada and talks to scholars, colleagues, friends and neighbours about equal access for women. Islam is the fastest growing religion in the world. In North America, a large number of converts are women. Many are drawn to the religion because of its emphasis on social justice and spiritual equality between the sexes. Yet, many mosques force women to pray behind barriers, separate from men, and some do not even permit women to enter the building. Exploring all sides of the issue, the film examines the space - both physical and social - granted to women in mosques across the country. Written and directed by Zarqa Nawaz. In 1945 the Mendez, Guzman, Estrada, and Ramirez families led a movement to integrate Orange County elementary schools. They succeeded. FAMILIES FOR EQUALITY, a Fullerton College production, weaves together family members’ memories of the Mendez et al. v. Westminster School District of Orange County et al. federal desegregation case with the first public performance of Fullerton College Faculty Librarian Erica Bennett’s play EL PRIMER DIA DE CLASES. This film focuses on civil rights, educational equality, and multicultural understanding of the landmark case that set the precedent for Brown vs. Board of Education. It features many of the original family members who participated in this class action lawsuit and students from the college’s Ethnic Studies Department. Directed by Erica Bennett.

Mendez v. Westminster school district Chicano Studies Research Center symposium, May 21, 2004 Series - This UCLA Chicano Studies Research Center hosted symposium on the “Mendez v. Westminster School District case: paving the way for school desegregation” was held on May 21, 2004. The 1946 and 1947 decisions in Mendez resulted in the ending of de jure segregation in California and, as seen by many scholars, was a precursor to Brown v. the Board of Education and the end to legally accepted school segregation in 1954. The symposium brought together scholars, students, artists, experts from across California to discuss the case including a number of individuals who attended the segregated Mexican schools in the 1940s. The Criterion Collection Series - In a Japanese prison camp on Java in 1942, two British officers, John Lawrence and Jack Celliers, encounter camp commander Yonoi and his sergeant Hara. Things had been going pretty well, until charismatic, rebellious Celliers arrived. Yonoi is a devotee of the samurai ideal; neither he nor Hara can understand the stoic way in which the British prisoners accept their situation of defeat. Lawrence speaks Japanese, and ceaselessly tries to mediate between the prisoners and their overseers, translating both the words and the values of the two races. Celliers’ attitude, however, is more comprehensible to Yonoi. He and Celliers arrive at a sort of detente, based on an admiration for the other, but this eventually turns into a contest of wills as the camp’s carefully nurtured equilibrium is destroyed. Based on the novel “The seed and the sower” by Sir Laurens van der Post; Booklet featuring an essay by film writer Chuck Stephens and reprinted interviews with director Nagisa Oshima and actor Takeshi Kitano; In English and Japanese with English subtitles.

Eaten Alive : parasites and their human hosts Series - Program three of a three part series discusses humankind's oldest enemies, lethal micro-parasites. Micro-parasites are stronger and more mobile and may threaten the survival of the human race. Some believe to be long ago eradicated from the industrialized world have reappeared in drug resistant strains. Others once only known to appear in remote regions are now showing up wherever travelers can fly in planes. Outbreaks of parasitic or parasite-borne illness examined in this program include SARS, West Nile virus, Ebola, tuberculosis, and bubonic plague. The "Eaten Alive: parasites and their human hosts" series was originally broadcast on BBCW and titled "Body Snatchers." The three part series on the relationship between parasites and human beings uses case studies, experiments, computer simulations, medical imaging, and commentary by leading experts to expose the intricate ways in which parasites colonize the human body and illustrates how to treat infected patients. The series has been described as graphic and viewer discretion is advised. Narrated by Ross Kenny. Directed by Jeremy Turner and Martin Belderson.

Mono Lake candidly captures the young artists as they explore the haunting landscape of one of the oldest and most distinctive lakes in North America. Heizer and Smithson are heard reading facts about the unique ecology, geology and natural phenomena of this alkaline lake. These dry recitations are interspersed with their anecdotal descriptions of their actions at the site. The voices over are set against filmed images and snapshots of the artists within the uncanny beauty of the lakes environment. Mono Lake is a document of a unique natural environment, a "home movie" of the artists' 1968 road trip, and an intimate view of three seminal figures in the earth art movement as they interact with the Western landscapes that are so central to their work. Inspired by real events, it’s the 1972 Olympics and PLO terrorists have just kidnapped and murdered 11 Israeli athletes. After the tragic incident is over and several of the terrorists have gone free, the Israeli government of Golda Meir recruits Avner to lead a team of undercover agents to hunt down those responsible throughout Europe, and eliminate them one-by-one. It is physically and emotionally messy work, and conflicts between Avner and his team’s handler, Ephraim, over information Avner doesn’t want to provide only make things harder. Soon the work starts to take its toll on Avner, especially as it becomes clear that Avner is being hunted in return, and that his family’s safety may be in jeopardy. Cast includes Eric Bana, Daniel Craig, Ciaran Hinds, Mathieu Kassovitz, Hans Zischler, Geoffrey Rush. Music by John Williams. Screenplay by Tony Kushner and Eric Roth. Directed by Steven Spielberg. A land of smiles : (DVD)
This narrated DVD explores the sacred music, dance and rituals of devidasis and devidasas, women and men dedicated to the goddess Renuka/Yellamma. Worshipped by millions of devotees in the border regions of southern Maharashtra, northern Karnataka, and adjacent areas of India, this fertility goddess is best known through her role in the activism protesting practices linked to sexuality and prostitution. Her musical and social traditions have parallels in the devadasi (women dedicated to male deities) system in Tamil Nadu before its reform and classicization in the early twentieth century. The DVD attempts to balance the typically negative representations of the tradition, which tend to focus on controversial practices and to exclude the unique musical forms essential to the worship of the goddess Renuka/Yellamma. Fictive documentary techniques employed include the autobiographical voice of the Goddess, who reflects on elements of her own varied histories and some of the practices of her followers, and the voice of her son Parasuram. Virtuosic performances by women and men practitioners (jogtas and jogappas, including transgender individuals) are featured in ensembles including the chaundake, a one-stringed variable-tension plucked drum believed to have first been fashioned by Parasuram from a demon’s skull. These musical ritualists are necessary for calendrical festivals shown in the video such as pilgrimage during Rande Purnima (Widows’ Full Moon), when devidasis are temporarily widowed, processions in the Baby-Dropping Ritual, and for biweekly mendicancy rounds and oracle rituals. Police threats to confiscate musical instruments, and protest songs sung within the tradition against the dedication of children, attest to contemporary conflicts surrounding the goddess and her music, the endangerment of her chaundake, and the human rights issues at stake. Contains: 1. Introduction: pilgrimage (at the Full Moon) – 2. Autobiography of a Goddess – 3. Parasurama creates the chaundake – 4. Women chaundake players on the Maharashtra/Karnataka border – 5. COLOR 181 MIN ZIPPORAH F 2014
Documentary directed by Frederick Wiseman providing the audience with a look inside London's famous National Gallery. With more than 2000 paintings from the 13th to the 19th century, the National Gallery is the fourth most visited art museum in the world and Wiseman takes the audience behind the scenes of a London institution, on a journey to the heart of a museum inhabited by masterpieces of western art from the Middle Ages to the 19th century. The film includes shots of 255 of the Gallery's paintings and portrays the day-to-day work of curators, conservators, art historians, and visitors. National Gallery is the portrait of a place, its way of working and relations with the world, its staff and public, and its paintings. Written and directed by Frederick Wiseman.

The film demonstrates how to step onto our building site, pick up the earth under our feet, and using field tests analyze and choose a suitable material for constructing our home, permanent communities and emergency shelter. Sharing stories of both personal experience and investigation, he shows us how non-toxic materials to build healthy and healing homes. The principles applied in the innovative modern technology of Superadobe have their roots in the timeless, universal elements earth, water, air and fire. Superadobe technology (sandbag, tubes, and barbed wire) is designed and developed by architect Nader Khalili, and engineered by P.J.Vittore. Prototypes have been constructed and tested for the City of Hesperia, California, Building and Safety Department, in consultation with I.C.B.O. Documentary that examines how the African-American community is grappling with the gay rights issue in light of the recent gay marriage movement and the fight over civil rights. The film documents activists, families and clergy on both sides of the campaign to legalize gay marriage and examines homophobia in the black community's institutional pillar – the black church – and reveals the Christian right wing's strategy of exploiting this phenomenon in order to pursue an anti-gay political agenda. This award-winning documentary boldly examines the controversial and challenging issues facing African American communities on gay civil rights, campaigns for and against marriage equality and in particular the role of faith institutions. The film makes a compelling case that the fight for LGBT rights in Black communities is an extension of the Black Freedom Struggle. Interviewees: Karess Taylor-Hughes, Sharon Lettman-Hicks, Yvette Flunder, Eric P. Doon School quintet Series - This film focuses on life in a school dormitory at the Doon School in northern India. A new group of 12-year-old students arrives to start their lives at the elite boarding school. The film follows them from their first day, exploring their emotional and intellectual lives as they experience homesickness, fights, classroom teaching, and the stirrings of group identity. Although these boys are the same age as those in the earlier “With Morning Hearts,” the group dynamics captured here are very different from that film. This is the fourth film in ethnographic filmmaker David MacDougall's long-term, five-part study of childhood and adolescence at the Doon School. The school is India's foremost boarding school for boys, and the series provides unique insights into the values and training of the Indian middle class in particular and postcolonial elites more generally. California and the American Dream Series - This program in the "California and the American Dream" series presents a portrait of Los Angeles as a city in the midst of a turbulent transition. Los Angeles is developing into a dynamic new city, one grappling with the same issues that are becoming commonplace throughout the nation: immigration, globalization, de-industrialization, economic inequality, and a shrinking middle class. Exploring the complexities of inclusion in Los Angeles—the nation's largest "majority-minority" city and the city with the nation's largest divide between rich and poor; the film profiles the efforts of immigrants and the working poor, in coalition with community organizations, labor unions, and elected officials, to transform the environment in which they live and to make the city of Los Angeles accountable to its residents. The city's story is about forging coalitions, nurturing inclusion, seeding innovation, salvaging identity, and building community.

Director Patrizio Guzman travels 10,000 feet above sea level to the driest place on earth, the Atacama Desert, where atop the mountains astronomers from all over the world gather to observe the sky. The sky is so transparent that it allows them to see the right to the boundaries of the universe. The Atacama is also the place where the harsh heat of the sun keeps human remains intact: those of Pre-Columbian mummies; 19th century explorers and miners; and the remains of political prisoners, “disappeared” by the Chilean army after the military coup of September, 1973. So while astronomers examine the most distant and oldest galaxies, at the foot of the mountains, women, surviving relatives of the disappeared whose bodies were dumped here, search, even after twenty-five years, for the remains of their loved ones, to reclaim their families’ histories. Directed by Patrizio Guzman. In Spanish with English subtitles.

COLOR 69 MIN NATIONAL F 1981
A thought-provoking chronicle of two women, Bonnie Klein, the director of the film, and Linda Lee Tracey, a stripper, as they explore the world of peep shows, strip joints, and sex supermarkets. Both are motivated by the desire to know more about pornography – why it exists, the form it takes, and how it affects relations between men and women. Their search offers insights and perspectives from men and women who earn their living in the porn trade, and from some of pornography’s most outspoken critics. Film contains explicit sex footage.

We’ve been told again and again that sports and politics don’t mix. In this documentary, Dave Zirin, sports editor of The Nation magazine, takes viewers on a tour of the good, the bad, and the ugly of American sports culture – showing how sports have helped both to stabilize and to disrupt the political status quo throughout history. Explores how American sports, at their worst, have reinforced repressive political ideas and institutions by glamorizing things like militarism, racism, sexism, and homophobia, as well as looking at a history of rebel athletes who dared to fight for social justice beyond the field of play. Written by Dave Zirin, Jeremy Earp and Chris Boulton. Directed by Jeremy Earp. Language: English; Subtitles: English.

Reggio Emilia is an Early Childhood Educational approach developed in the Italian city of the same name. The approach emerged after the end of World War II when the country was rebuilding from the toll the war and fascism had taken on the people of Italy. Realizing the valuable resource the young children of the country represented, the adults of Reggio Emilia devoted great interest and resources to the young children of the... town. The city of Reggio Emilia invested in the future by developing a dedicated library and museum. The Reggio approach calls for child directed learning through experiences emphasizing touching, moving, listening, seeing, and hearing. Reggio places emphasis on relationships with other children and teachers; affording children endless ways and opportunities to express themselves. The approach depends on the support of teachers, family, and the community. The film is a homage to the children, parents, teachers, pedagogistas, and administrators who have aided the children to learn and grow.

In 1948, legendary screen actress Ida Lupino left Warner Brothers to co-found The Filmmakers, an independent production company conceived as an alternative to the dominant aesthetics of Hollywood. With the low-key, intimate Not wanted (produced the next year by her Emerald Productions, Inc., Lupino tackled the taboo topic of out-of-wedlock pregnancy, immediately venturing into terrain where big-budget mainstream fantasy-spinners feared to tread. In many ways this extraordinary first directorial effort, while uncredited, already bears the stamp of Lupino’s unique vision: the remarkable empathy felt for the lead character, cast includes Sally Forrest, Keefe Brasselle and Leo Penn. Directed chiefly by Ida Lupino, following Elmer Clifton’s heart attack on the 3rd day of filming, although Ms. Lupino declined the screen credit for directing. In English.
