In 1989, the Centre Georges Pompidou in Paris asked Wim Wenders to create a film about the world of fashion. Initially resistant to the idea, Wenders soon became fascinated by the craft and philosophy of Japanese designer Yohji Yamamoto as he prepared his new seasons collections. From the streets and studios of Tokyo to the boulevards and catwalks of Paris, Wenders uncovers the essence of Yamamoto’s work while exploring the enigma of style, the language of image and the very nature of human identity. The result is an extraordinary examination of both fashion and cinema as a way of life carried along only by a unique vision and vivid curiosity. Starring Yohji Yamamoto. Written and directed by Wim Wenders. The special features on this DVD include: Widescreen presentation enhanced for 16x9 TVs; Audio commentary with director Wim Wenders; Twelve Years Later director and designer reunite; Deleted scenes with commentary by director Wim Wenders; Wim Wenders bio. The Atom Bomb Collection Series - During the heart of the Cold War, the United States and the former Soviet Union launched and detonated a combined total of over 20 thermonuclear weapons in space. The detonations created awe-inspiring man-made auroras, but behind the beauty of these so-called "Rainbow Bombs" hid the ugly aftermath: radiation belts and the lingering effects they have on Earth's near-space region. Much of the information on these tests was kept secret until recently, when newly declassified test footage and government documents revealed the truth. Starting with the Nazi's V-1 and V-2 rockets, this film follows the development of ICBM's with nuclear warheads, the Cuban Missle Crisis, and anti-ballistic missile systems, and evaluates their implications on the future of our nation's security. 1970
The Britten-Pears collection Series - Based on a story by Henry James, Britten Owen Wingrave was commissioned by the BBC as a television opera. It was originally broadcast in May 1971, with Britten himself conducting an outstanding cast of British singers including Peter Pears, Janet Baker and Benjamin Luxon. Reflecting Britten’s own deeply-held pacifist beliefs, the opera’s central character is a young man from an impeccable military background, whose rejection of violence and war leads him into a family conflict with a bitter and tragic conclusion. Bonus features include introductions and interviews. Performed by the English Chamber Orchestra. Program notes and synopsis in English. French and German (27 p.) inserted in container.

Directed by Brian Large and Colin Graham. Sung in English. Operas; Large, Brian.; Filmed operas.; Britten, Benjamin, 1913-1976; Pears, Peter.; Graham, Colin.

FIRST RUN
Ten years ago, The Screech was the hottest lesbian band around. But the mighty musicians have fallen into obscurity and unanticipated turmoil. Iris dreams of a comeback and drinks too much. MJ is her ex, but neither of them can quite let go. Former bandmate Lily and her partner Carol aren’t getting along so, naturally, they’re trying to have a child together. When a pool party goes horribly wrong, the death of a younger lesbian knocks these longtime friends and lovers even further out of orbit. The Older, Wiser Lesbians, or OWLS, work together to hide the body, burying it in a ditch under a swimming pool, and filling the grave with cement, becoming conspirators in a dangerous game. Cast includes Guinevere Turner, Lisa Gornick, Skyler Cooper, Cheryl Dunye, V.S. Brodie, and Deak Evgenikos. Screenplay by Sarah Schulman and Cheryl Dunye. Directed by Cheryl Dunye. This widescreen edition features ‘Concept: The Parliament;’ Cast and crew biographies; Hooters trailer; Language: English; Captioned for the deaf and hard of hearing.

The Pallisers Series - The Pallisers is a sprawling BBC saga of wealth, passion, power, intrigue and scandal, originally broadcast on television during the 1974-1975 season. Based on the novels by Anthony Trollope, set in Victorian era England with a backdrop of parliamentary life. Cast includes Susan Hampshire, Philip Latham, Anna Massey, Barbara Murray, Roland Culver.
Part Twenty-Two: We come in on the Lopez's honeymoon in Rome. At the same time Silverbridge and Tregear are in Venice where they meet Lady Mabel Grex and Miss Cassewary. Ferdinand begins to show his true colours as he presses Emily for money. Her father comes through and Lopez thinks that he now has free access to all her father's wealth. Plantagenet rebels and asks that no more people be invited to Gatherum. Reluctantly at first, Glencora agrees. Part Twenty-Three: Plantagenet has worries aplenty in the form of resignations and scandal. Phineas is named the First Lord of the Admiralty and his wife will accompany him on his tour of the Navy, taking away Glencora's most loyal confidante. She insists that she take the blame for the troubles over Mr. Lopez, but Plantagenet refuses absolutely. In an attempt to extort money from her father, Lopez threatens to take Emily to Guatemala, and away from her family. Directed by Hugh David. In English.

Based on the novels by Anthony Trollope, set in Victorian era England with a backdrop of parliamentary life. Cast includes Susan Hampshire, Philip Latham, Anna Massey, Barbara Murray, Roland Culver.
Part Nine: Phineas continues to juggle his women. Meanwhile the Duke of Omnium continues his pursuit of Madame Max: she handles him with extreme skill and grace. Laura has become so miserable that she asks Phineas not to come to Scotland again. Phineas is rescued from his money problems by Fitzgibbon's sister and then goes to Brentford to stand for his new seat in Parliament. While there he decides to ask Violet to marry him, an act that will bring him into conflict with both Chiltern and Lord Brentford. Part Ten: We begin with the duel between Phineas and Chiltern. Finn takes a wound in the shoulder. But, the bullet does not do as much damage as the smear campaign that Snide begins in 'The People's Banner'. Phineas's attempt to enlist Laura's aid in winning Violet is rebuffed at first, but, later she decides to do what she can. We are introduced to Lord Fawn, whose ineptness will be a joy to watch in the episodes to come. Directed by Hugh David. In English.

Part Twenty-Two: We come in on the Lopez's honeymoon in Rome. At the same time Silverbridge and Tregear are in Venice where they meet Lady Mabel Grex and Miss Cassewary. Ferdinand begins to show his true colours as he presses Emily for money. Her father comes through and Lopez thinks that he now has free access to all her father's wealth. Plantagenet rebels and asks that no more people be invited to Gatherum. Reluctantly at first, Glencora agrees. Part Twenty-Three: Plantagenet has worries aplenty in the form of resignations and scandal. Phineas is named the First Lord of the Admiralty and his wife will accompany him on his tour of the Navy, taking away Glencora's most loyal confidante. She insists that she take the blame for the troubles over Mr. Lopez, but Plantagenet refuses absolutely. In an attempt to extort money from her father, Lopez threatens to take Emily to Guatemala, and away from her family. Directed by Hugh David. In English.

In 1975, London theatre designer Peter Minshall was invited to design a masquerade band for the Trinidad Carnival. The result was a milestone in Trinidad Carnival design and the emergence of a new master artist of the Mas. Minshall's band, Paradise Lost, won Band of the Year, Its King, won King of the Carnival, and the individual costumes won every prize in their category. Prior to that 1975 carnival, costumed bands were designed for historic pageantry and ornamental display, with Paradise Lost, mas was enlivened both in spirit and in form. Minshall designs had an instantaneous impact on the consciousness of an entire country. Minshall shares the story of the design and construction of the landmark band. He is shown watching cinematographer George Tangs film recording, the only know motion picture of Paradise Lost. Directed by Christopher Laird. Alvin’s Guide to Good Business: Case Studies in Social Entrepreneurship Series - A half-century of helping disadvantaged communities, beginning when he was a first-year Harvard medical student. Alvin has reinvented Paul Farmer’s belief that access to health care is a basic human right. He argues that by delivering quality care to the poor, severe health issues such as AIDS or MDR-TB can be tackled effectively. Through a community-based approach, along with training doctors and health workers in impoverished areas, Partners in Health – the organization Dr. Farmer founded in 1987 – has saved thousands of lives. In Peru it has achieved cure rates for MDR-TB which are higher than at many hospitals in the United States. This program features an analysis of PIH’s potential in Malawi, presented by Alvin Hall. Alvin Hall, a finance expert with 25 years of experience on Wall Street, travels the world meeting social entrepreneurs and business leaders who are just as interested in doing good as in making money. In this eight-part series, Hall advises socially conscious enterprises and organizations operating in the developing world about how to become more effective. From Africa to Asia to North America, Hall presents executives with specific challenges that will put each group on a track toward becoming the streamlined source of global improvement its founders intended it to be. Tells the story of the water war between the Owens Valley Paiute and the City of Los Angeles, which diverted the Owens River through the Los Angeles Aqueduct, 200 miles across the Mojave Desert. The Owens Valley Paiute constructed and managed 60 square miles of intricate irrigation systems for millennia, but found their ancient waterworks taken over by white settlers after the Indian War of 1863. Using archival maps from 1856, the filmmakers spent four years working with Paiute elders to locate and map their remnant irrigation systems using GIS technology, laying a foundation for a "first use" water rights case. Participants include Harry Williams, Kathy Bancroft, Alan Babcock, Teri Red Owl. Directed by Jenna Cavalle.

A film about cinema itself, with close readings of some of the most intriguing and celebrated films in cinema history. Serving as guide is the charismatic Slovenian philosopher and psychoanalyst Slavoj Žižek, who delves into the hidden language of cinema, uncovering what movies can tell us about ourselves. Structured in three parts, the Pervert’s Guide to Cinema offers an introduction to Žižek’s ideas on fantasy, reality, sexuality, subjectivity, form and desire. In a striking visual leap, director Sophie Fiennes immerses Žižek into the scenes he discusses. Whether he is unraveling the films of David Lynch, or overturning everything you thought you knew about Hitchcock, Žižek illuminates the screen with his passion, intellect and unfailing sense of humour. Picasso and Braque go to the movies : (DVD)
18662,ID
COLOR 60 MIN NEW VIDEO 2008
This film advances an interesting thesis: if the static visual arts affected early cinema's vocabulary, did moving pictures inspire Cubism's two towering giants, Pablo Picasso and Georges Braque? Cinema and Cubism were born during the birth of modernity itself, and filmmaker Arne Gimlicher argues that films, from the earliest days of Thomas Edison and the Lumiere Brothers, were a crucial formative influence on Modern painting, particularly on Picasso and Braque. The movies' revolutionary portrayal of time, space, and motion was the engine behind the modernist revolution in fine art. Through interviews with art historians, practicing plastic and visual artists, poets, and filmmakers, it traces the effects of technological revolution—specifically the invention of aviation and the creation of cinema—and their interdependent influence on the art dubbed Modern. The pilgrimage to the sanctuary of the Lord of Qoyllur Rit'i : the walk experience : (DVD)

This film focuses on the comparsas or dance troupes from the community of Pomacanchi, Cuzco, that continue the tradition of walking all the way to the sanctuary, covering 85 miles up and down mountains in three days and two nights, accompanied by the incessant music of flutes and drums. The film deftly interweaves footage from three separate pilgrimages in which the filmmaker provided to participate a close and detailed depiction of the pilgrims' experiences and explore the importance of the unit of sound, sight, and smell in the construction of meaning and memory to them. The film also includes scenes of important activities in the community of Pomacanchi before and after the pilgrimage, as well as remarkable footage of the ceremonial rituals at the sanctuary. The pilgrimage combines longstanding Andean principles and practices and those brought into the tradition by Catholicism. A film by Zolia S. Mendoza.

Pit firing is an exciting firing process with roots in the earliest forms of pottery making. Burnishing is the technique of polishing clay without the use of glaze. Ancient potters used these techniques to produce their wares before glazes and kilns were developed: modern potters use pit firing and burnishing to create works of great beauty. In this video Sumi von Dassow shares the methods of pit firing and burnishing that she has developed over the course of thirty years. You will learn how to prepare pots for firing, what materials and chemicals to use in the firing, and how to load and fire a pit. Pacific artists series 2011 - Michel Tuffery is a New Zealand based artist of Samoan, Rarotongan and Tahitian heritage. His work “Povi bull fights” is the summary of multiple sculptural and performative installations that use large pneumatic bulls made from corned beef tins. The theatre for these bullights include Aboriginal Australian and Pacific Island dance groups, fire-dancers, drumming and pyrotechnics. The clash of the bulls symbolizes social tension between Islander communities, as well as the clash between traditional lifestyles and the pressures of modernization.

California and the American Dream Series - This program in the "California and the American Dream" series examines complex issues of community development, philanthropy, and civic engagement by chronicling the long-term redevelopment of an older, deteriorating neighborhood called City Heights, often referred to as the Ellis Island of San Diego. The film probes both the potential and the pitfalls of public/private partnerships in addressing the problems of inner city decay, as well as the thorny questions raised by the gentrification of multicultural urban neighborhoods. The redevelopment of City Heights demonstrates how urban redevelopment can be a double-edged sword, showing what is gained and what is lost as the community develops and improves itself.

Based on Leo Tolstoy’s classic tale of hope, courage, and humanity, follows the spellbinding journey of two Russian POWs held captive in the infamously brutal and magnificent Caucasian Mountains. Caucasian rebels ambush a Russian patrol; a local patriarch takes two surviving Russian soldiers as prisoners in hopes of exchanging the men for his son who is a Russian captive. The Russian soldiers are bound by their hatred of the enemy, but find their stance weakened by the rugged beauty of the mountains and the compassion of the patriarch’s daughter. When their swap for freedom is sabotaged, the men must face the futility of war, the tragedy of intolerance and the threat of prejudice. In this video adaptation of her bestselling book, pioneering feminist blogger Jessica Valenti trains her sights on "the virginity movement" – an unhealthy alliance of evangelical Christians, right-wing politicians, and conservative policy intellectuals who have been exploiting irrational fears about women's sexuality to roll back women's rights. From dad-and-daughter "purity balls," taxpayer-funded abstinence-only curricula, and political attacks on Planned Parenthood, to recent attempts by legislators to defund women's reproductive health care and narrow the legal definition of rape, Valenti identifies a single, unifying assumption: the myth that the worth of a woman depends on what she does – or does not do – sexually. In the end, Valenti argues that the happiness and well-being of women are too important to be left to ideologues bent on viliﬁing feminism and undermining women's autonomy. Directed by Jeremy Earp. Cultural historian Dave Zirin, whose influential blog and bestselling books have offered searing insights into the politics of American sports, examines the myriad ways sports culture has worked both to reproduce and challenge the wider culture's dominant ideas about race and racial difference. Interviewed by Communication scholar Sut Jhally, whose own work has sought to clarify the relationship between popular culture and racial attitudes, Zirin's analysis ranges from the emergence of professional sports in the 1800s to today's commercial media sports spectacles to show how athletes of color have posed a direct threat to traditional notions of whiteness, white male authority, and American ideals of masculinity. The film is richly illustrated throughout with archival and contemporary sports footage. Featuring Dave Zirin in conversation with Sut Jhally. COLOR 85 MIN REEL LINK 2009
A film which challenges the practices of many parents and school systems about how to best prepare young people for the future. The filmmakers warn parents and educators of the dangers of the high-stakes, high-pressure culture in grade school and family lives that is negatively impacting children, producing students and educators who are burned out. The pressure-cooker culture rampant in schools today, experts worry, is producing young people who arrive at college and the workplace unprepared and uninspired to thrive. The film features the stories of young people across the country that have been pushed to the brink. A call to action, the film advocates for change which can only be implemented if families, educators, and policy makers challenge deeply-held assumptions about how to best prepare young people to become healthy, bright, contributing, and leading citizens. Rising out of the women's movement of the 1960's, the Women's Cultural Movement allowed women artist and musicians a platform to celebrate all facets of womanhood, especially those ignored or discriminated against in mainstream society. No longer constrained by the boundaries of popular music, artists were able to express ideas and emotions free of discrimination in a community that sought to include and embrace and not exclude any segment of the population. During the 1970's and 80's women's music offered a different message than... mainstream musical culture. The history of the movement is told using performance footage, interviews, and archival material. As the movement moves into a new millennium, the music might have a harder edge, but the message being conveyed continues to be one of acceptance and woman empowerment. A journey through the racial "off-worlds" of migrant camps where homeless indigenous Mixteco workers coexist within yards of employers in gated designer home enclaves in the suburban southern California towns of Carlsbad, La Costa, and Del Mar. The film explores the charged debate over the meaning and consequences of immigrant culture near America's southern border and examines the complex realities of race and class in this country. Over five years, the filmmaker - a former farm worker - explores a set of media ideals about participation and... self-representation, but finally faces layers of complicity, including his own. Written and directed by John Caldwell.

A history of the ancient and modern Olympic Games produced to mark the return of the 2004 games to Greece. The Olympic Games were held every four years without interruption for nearly twelve centuries, existing almost 800 years before the birth of Jesus Christ and continued for four centuries after his death. The Olympics were eventually abandoned and long forgotten before they were reintroduced in the modern age, growing to become the world’s most prestigious sporting event. This program looks at the ancient and modern games, employing reconstructions of ancient games and dramatic highlights from the modern events, contrasting the events and demonstrating the connections that remain a part of the Olympics to this day. Ism – Great Movements of Western Culture Series - It is a creative impulse as old as humanity itself: to depict life faithfully, accurately, in words or images. This program shows how that impulse led to Realism, a widespread artistic movement, born in the latter half of the 19th century, which rejected pretense, distortion, and sentimentality. Incorporating interviews with art historians and literary scholars, the program explores the sociopolitical origins of the phenomenon in the 1848 Revolution in France and the concurrent wave of industrialization that swept Europe and America. Luminous images by Edouard Manet, Gustave Courbet, Jean-Francois Millet, and Honore Daumier, along with the unflinching writings of Honore de Balzac, Gustave Flaubert, Emile Zola, Leo Tolstoy, Fyodor Dostoyevsky, Anton Chekhov, August Strindberg, and Henrik Ibsen, are analyzed and compared with the work of Thomas Eakins, George Bellows, Mark Twain, Jack London, Stephen Crane, and others. COLOR 120 MIN BERKELEY M 1995
The contemporary Native American Sobriety Movement flourishing throughout Indian communities of North America is a vital social movement combining ancient spiritual traditions with modern medical approaches to substance abuse recovery. One traditional element that is widely used is the "talking circle." Participants hold a sacred eagle feather while talking about whatever is on their mind. Other participants in the circle listen respectfully, encouraging the speaker to open their mind and heart, to share stories, feelings, and prayers. The feather is passed around the circle; each member of the circle has a turn as speaker and listener. This video includes noted Native American therapists and healers featured in eight 15-minute segments. The segments are designed to be used as a prevention and recovery tool by individuals, clinics, recovery programs, schools, and youth groups. The segments are: "Introduction to the talking circle," "Wisdom of the elders," "Women of the circle," "Fetal alcohol syndrome," "Healing the youth," "Men of the circle," "Native ways of treatment," and "The red road approach." The DVD version allows for access to each segment. Co-directed by Chante Pierce and Gary Rhine.

A survey of American cinematic history and the persistent pattern of negative Arab stereotyping that have existed from the very earliest days of Hollywood film productions. Throughout its history Hollywood has portrayed Arabs as buffoons, villains, bandits, and terrorists. The film provides insight into the origins of these images and their disturbing similarities to anti-Semitic and racist stereotypes from the past. A challenge is made to produce alternative narratives that treat Arabs as human beings, not demons that do justice to both the diversity and humanity of Arab people, and the reality and richness of Arab history and culture. The program features the sections: Introduction; Myths of Arabland; The Arab Threat; Mideast Politics & Hollywood; Terror Inc: Demonizing Palestinians & Muslims; The Only Good Arab.; Islamophobia; and Getting Real. Reflections of the Past steps into the lives Pauline Parker and Juliet Hulme, two teenage girls who met during the year of 1952 in Christchurch Girls High School in New Zealand. Discovering things in common and shared passions brought them even closer together. Their home lives slowly began to crumble from 1953 to 1954 with increased tension between Pauline and her mother, Honora. Juliets parents were planning to get a divorce and leave New Zealand. The separation of Pauline and Juliet was imminent. The murder of Paulines mother occurred in Victoria Park on Tuesday, June 22, 1954 overlooking the city of Christchurch. A trial found both girls guilty and imprisonment was set forth. Upon serving five years in prison, Pauline and Juliet were released. This documentary film brings the past to the present with newspaper images, reenactment footage, revisiting places Pauline & Juliet once knew in Christchurch, and interviews providing an open discussion regarding the murder case and relationship of Pauline & Juliet. Reenactment cast includes Alice Driewitt and Brenna Lorraine. Aspects of Animal Behavior Series - Combines normal and macrophotography with scanning electron microscopy and a computer-interfaced physiological monitoring system to demonstrate respiration in two unrelated aquatic insects, a belostomatid bug and a hydrophilid beetle. Each species captures an air bubble, either at the water surface or from the surface of aquatic vegetation, dives, and remains underwater for an extended period by extracting oxygen from the bubble. Notes traces the history of Stax, from a modest neighborhood hangout to a cultural and political empire. Stax is the story of birth and the soul of music which keeps it alive. The southern city of Memphis was a hotbed of racial tension, but that stopped at the doors to Stax Records. The open-door policy led to renowned house band Booker T. & the MGs, one of Americas first interracial musical groups. Other artists like Otis Redding and Sam & Dave soon joined the roster, as well as songwriter Isaac Hayes. With songs like 'Sittin On The Dock of the Bay,' 'Soul Man,' and 'Knock On Wood,' Stax solidified its reputation as a hit-making machine, producing a massive catalog of Top 100 records. Through all this, the label overcame hustlers, bad business decisions, tragic deaths and a number of financial meltdowns. But with each reincarnation, Stax grew, branching off into other film production, Broadway, the Black Power movement, changing the world because it didn’t know it wasn’t supposed to. 'Respect Yourself' provides first-hand accounts of what really happened on the streets and behind studio doors from celebrated musicians such as Isaac Hayes, Booker T. Jones, Steve Cropper, Donald Duck Dunn and Mavis Staples, as well as label president Al Bell, Rev. Jesse Jackson and others. Uses rare performances, previously unreleased home movies and new recordings. Originally broadcast on PBS on August 1, 2007. Narrated by Samuel L. Jackson. Written by Morgan Neville, Robert Gordon, and Mark Crosby. Directed by Robert Gordon and Morgan Neville. Widescreen presentation. Language: English; Captioned for the deaf and hard of hearing.

The show ran for 5 years and aired on both the ABC and NBC television network. The show's two main characters are Rocky J. Squirrel, a brave flying squirrel and his best pal, Bullwinkle, a dumb and clumsy moose living in the town of Frostbite Falls, Minnesota. The series usually involves their misadventures involving enemies Boris and Natasha, the dastardly Russian spy duo bent on ending the noble antics of "moose and squirrel" and thereby gaining power over the fictional nation of Pottsylvania. "Rocky and Bullwinkle and Friends" also featured short bookend stories—most notably Dudley Do-Right, the clueless Canadian Mountie always saving damsels from the villainous Snidely Whiplash, and another bookend involving Sherman and Peabody, a boy and dog brainiac who travel through time to discover the real story behind historical events and right the wrongs to make sure the events actually happen. Series created by Jay Ward and Bill Scott. The complete fifth season includes Disc 1: Episodes 1-9; Disc 2: Episodes 10-18; Disc 3: Episodes 19-27; Disc 4: Episodes 28-33. Special features include the "Goof Gas Attack" outtake, a.k.a. "The Longest Laugh in History." Language: English and Spanish

Three years prior to the famous gay riot at New York's Stonewall Inn, the first act of collective, violent resistance to the social oppression of queer people in the United States took place in San Francisco's Compton's Cafeteria. It was a battle for simply being allowed to exist, and the battle raged on in the ensuing years as the protests spread to many other cities. December 1962, the target of the pacifist marchers was a San Francisco gay bar called Compton's Cafeteria. The bar was a social center where young men gathered to dance and socialize, and it was also a venue for drag shows. But the bar was not welcoming to the organizers of the protest, who were trying to be nonviolent so as not to be arrested. The protest turned violent, with protesters throwing bottles and patrons of the bar retaliating with violence. The police were called, but they did not intervene to stop the violence. Instead, they arrested the leaders of the protest, who were trying to protect the patrons of the bar. The incident became a defining moment in the history of the gay rights movement, and it is remembered as a significant precursor to the Stonewall riots of 1969.

The true story of Detroit musician Sixto Rodriguez. A folk singer discovered in Motown in the 1970's and signed by record producers with hopes of producing the next Dylan. When Rodriguez's albums failed to sell his career ended, his records went out-of-print in the United States, and he went back to working construction in Detroit. Unbeknownst to Rodriguez his music went on to find a cult following in South Africa and became a big hit with the young people of Apartheid South Africa. The success hoped for in America became a reality in South Africa, but due to South Africa's isolation from much of the world his fame didn't register in the United States. The musician was a mystery to his South African fans as well; it was believed that Rodriguez had died young. Years after the end of Apartheid rule and with information now more readily available via the internet, a South African fan with music industry connections was tasked to write the story of Rodriguez. Through detective work he wanted to finally determine the musician died. To his amazement he discovered that Rodriguez was still alive, still in Detroit, and was oblivious to his fame and success in South Africa. It was arranged for Rodriguez to come and play in South Africa, and the man who couldn't fill a small bar in the U.S., went and played to thousands of adoring South African fans. Original songs by Rodriguez. Written and directed by Malik Bendjelloul. This DVD version features widescreen presentation; Commentary with director Malik Bendjelloul and musician Rodriguez; An evening with Malik Bendjelloul and Rodriguez; Making Sugar man; Language: English; Subtitles: English.

The field of anthropology goes under the magnifying glass in this fiery investigation of the seminal research on Yanomami Indians. In the 1960s and '70s, a steady stream of anthropologists flocked to the Amazon Basin to observe this "virgin" society untouched by modern life. Thirty years later, the events surrounding this infiltration have become a scandalous tale of academic ethics and infighting. The origins of violence and war and the accuracy of data gathering are hotly debated among the scholarly clan. Soon these disputes take on "Heart of Darkness" overtones as they descend into shadowy allegations of sexual and medical violation. Directed by Jose Padilha, brilliantly emulates two provocative strategies to raise unsettling questions about the boundaries of cultural encounters. He allows professors accused of heinous activities to defend themselves, and the Yanomamo to represent their side of the story. As this riveting excavation deconstructs anthropology's colonial legacy, it challenges our society's myths of objectivity and the very notion of "the other." Directed by Jose Padilha. Language: South American Indian, Yanomamo, French and English with English subtitles.

When allowed to unfold in their own way and in their own time, children discover and inspire the best in themselves and in others. This video of infants who have been allowed to move freely since their earliest months will help viewers to see the grace, agility and coping skills that infants can acquire on their own when not impeded by devices such as propping pillows, walkers, swings or bounceers. The late Magda Gerber explains how the philosophy of respect applies to infants motor development from birth to two years, the stage where infants sensory-motor experiences are paramount, and basic to all subsequent mental and social development. The Educaring Approach is a model for pediatricians, parents, caregivers and anyone who spends time with infants. The late Magda Gerber and Tom Forrest, M.D. made this classic video during their collaboration at the Demonstration Infant Program in Pala Alto, California.

| The haunting story of the more than 200 kidnapped, raped, and murdered young women of Juarez, Mexico. The film is a compelling investigation which unravels the layers of complicity that have allowed for the brutal murders of women living along the Mexico-U.S. border. Juarez's location on this border and high profile job market belies a murky history of grossly underreported human rights abuses and violence against women. The filmaker relies on the testimonies of the families of the victims and documents a two-year search for the truth in the underbelly

An estimated half-million women are trafficked annually for the purpose of sexual slavery. The women are kidnapped or lured by promises of employment abroad, then "exported" to Europe, the Middle East, the United States, and elsewhere, where they are sold to pimps, drugged, terrorized, locked in brothels, and raped repeatedly. In Eastern Europe, sex trafficking has become the fastest growing form of organized crime, with Moldova and Ukraine widely seen as the centers of the global trade in women and girls. Traffickers, their female victims, and experts are interviewed. The program concentrates especially on the abduction of women in Moldova and Ukraine for forced prostitution in Turkey. The journey of one man determined to find his abducted wife is followed, he poses as a trafficker in order to buy back her freedom. Written and directed by Ric Esther Bienstock.

17512.ID COLOR 42 MIN MEDIA EDUC 2012 The powder keg that is porn culture has exploded in the lives of North American children. From thongs and padded bras for 9-year-old girls to "sexting," 24-7 internet porn, and unfiltered social media, kids today are bombarded with commercial sexual appeals like never before. In this astonishing new documentary, award-winning documentary filmmaker Maureen Palmer explores what is the radical transformation of the culture means for young people, parents, and our very notions of childhood. Palmer interviews researchers who have been tracking how the accelerating pressure to be sexy – and sexual – is changing kids' behavior and undermining their health. She sits down with parents and educators struggling to help kids navigate puberty in a hypermediated cultural environment that no longer seems to recognize or respect the developmental needs of children. And she talks to teens and pre-teens who share eerily casual insights into the routine role sex plays in their lives. The result is a stunning exploration of the sexualization of childhood and a startling wake-up call for parents who still think their own children are immune to the excesses and influences of today's sexed-up youth culture. Narrated by Ann-Marie MacDonald. Directed by Maureen Palmer. In English with optional subtitles in English.

<td>This documentary film provides an immersive journey through the recent history of American apocalypticism. A feature-length cinematic essay that explores an emerging apocalyptic mass movement seeking “dominion” over all aspects of contemporary society. Investigating the ideological echoes between The Arm of the Lord, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord, an obscure Christian survivalist group active in the 1970’s-80’s (whose compound included a mock town, dubbed “Silhouette City,” used for urban warfare training) and the mainstream Christian Right of today (including D. James Kennedy and his Coral Ridge Ministries, Rod Parsley, Ron Luce and his Teen Mania, Inc.), the filmmakers reveal a growing political force in the United States that seeks to usher in a fundamentalist Christian “city on a hill” by any means necessary, including efforts to proselytize within the military by taking advantage of command structure and by blurring the concepts of American military power with Christian moral authority. In a period marked with religious violence, the film examines the motivations for adopting an apocalyptic, militaristic worldview and opens a window into the foundational ideas, organizational structure and psychological dynamics of this powerful special interest group. Featured in the film are Kerry Noble, Melinda Morton, Ron Luce, Robert J. Litton, Mike Huckabee, Dr. D. COLOR 53 MIN SMOKE SIGN 2012
On the distant northwest edge of China lies Xinjiang, a vast region of snow-capped mountains, barren deserts and gritty market cities. Here, along the ancient Silk Road, music is one of the hottest commodities: it is vibrant, infectious, and far-reaching, permeating every corner of the province. Yet, around the music lies a troubling reality. Engaged in an identity tug-of-war, the region’s main population – the Uyghur Muslims – are gradually losing their populations and richness as they are engulfed by a predominant Han Chinese settlement. One of the very few documentaries to come out of Xinjiang, “The Silk Road of Pop” captures the challenges of a minority group in China and the explosive music scene which results. Featuring Mehmet (Maimaiti Aili), Karhan, Six City, X1, Aytulan. Directed by Sameer Farooq; co-directed by Ursula Engel. In English.

With intimate access and striking imagery, "Sin Pais" (Without Country) explores one family’s experience as they are separated by deportation. Sam and Elda Mejia escaped a violent Civil War in Guatemala and came to California. After raising their family for nearly 20 years in the Bay Area, immigration agents stormed the Mejia’s house in 2007. After a long and bitter fight to stay in the U.S., Sam and Elda are deported back to Guatemala, and leave their two teenage children in the U.S. This short documentary explores the complexities of the Mejia’s new reality: parents living without their children, and children doing their best to succeed without their parents. Parallel title on container and disc surface: “One family’s journey through deportation.” Language: English; English and Spanish dialogue with English subtitles. Directed by Theo Rigby.

Hip hop has always had a school that attempts to voice frustrations about the African-American condition in the United States. That spirit of resistance animates the rappers profiled in this film: Palestinian hip hop groups DAM (from Lydd or Lod), PR (Gaza), along with young women Abeer (Lydd), and duo Arabayat (Akka or Acre), who are also harassed for being independent females performing on stage. DAM formed as clueless teenagers, spent time spouting rap cliches, but in the wake of the second Intifada their lyrics became politicized, inspiring a hip hop movement across the Palestinian territories. These artists rap about friends killed in attacks, strafed buildings, rubble, fields stripped of every tree, and rage at separation walls and checkpoints. As Palestinian citizens living in a walled ghetto with minimal infrastructure and few opportunities for economic prosperity, these rappers have a lot to overcome on their way to success. Narrated by Suheil Nafar of DAM. Directed by Jackie Reem Salloum. Languages: Arabic, English, and Hebrew dialogue; Subtitles: English; Captioned for the deaf and hard of hearing.

This stand alone film revisits the Artinians family, who were the subjects of the documentary "Sound and Fury." That film dealt with the family, who are deaf, divided over the decision to have their six year old daughter receive a cochlear implant. The original film ended with the family deciding not to go ahead with the implant and moving the entire family to a signing deaf community in Maryland. This film returns to the family, who has moved back to Long Island, who in the time between films has changed their views on cochlear implants. Their daughter, two sons, the wife, aunt, and two cousins have all received implants. The daughter is seen functioning in both the hearing and deaf worlds and enjoying herself in both. The father, who was against the procedure in the original film, admits that through observation and education he has changed his views. Directed by Josh Aronson.

The HIV/AIDS epidemic is given a human face by introducing a cross-section of South Africans involved with the disease in their country. Individuals living and dying from the disease, activists fighting against the greed of the drug cartels and the denial of their own government, and dedicated health care workers highlight the successful movement that has grown up around the tragedy. The work of the Treatment Action Campaign (TAC) and HIV positive activist Zackie Achmat are profiled. Achmat refused to take life-saving drugs until they were made available to every South African with AIDS. Directed by Elaine Epstein. In English, Sotho, and Zulu with English subtitles.

The American Experience Series - The Stonewall riots were a dramatic event that launched a worldwide rights movement. Told by those who took part, from drag queens and street hustlers to police detectives, journalists, and a former mayor of New York, and featuring archival footage, this film revisits a time when homosexual acts were illegal throughout America, and homosexuality itself was seen as a form of mental illness. Hunted and often entrapped by undercover police in their hometowns, gays from around the U.S. began fleeing to New York in search of a sanctuary. Hounded there still by an aggressive police force, they found refuge in a Mafia-run gay bar in Greenwich Village, the Stonewall Inn. When police raided Stonewall on June 28, 1969, gay men and women did something they had not done before: they fought back. As the streets of New York erupted into violent protests and street demonstrations, the collective anger announced that the gay rights movement had arrived. Based on 'Stonewall: The Riots that Sparked the Revolution' by David Carter. Directed by Kate Davis and David Heilbroner. In 1967, a Canadian filmmaker was filming images of poverty in the Kentucky coalfields for a film showing people from all walks of life in the United States. Hugh O'Connor and his crew were doing filming the families living on a rental property and was preparing to leave when the owner of the property, Hobart Ison, drove up and shot O'Connor dead. Decades later Kentuckymaker Elizabeth Barret explores the incident and the motivations of the shooter, why it happened, trying to understand the people and culture of eastern Kentucky. She looks at the relationship between media makers and the communities they portray in their work. A film by Elizabeth Barret.

National Geographic Series - Psychological stress can have a lethal physiological effect on the body. Stanford University neurobiologist, Robert Sapolsky, has been advancing the understanding of stress – how it impacts our bodies and how our social standing can make us more or less susceptible. Research of baboon troops on the plains of Africa and neuroscience labs at Stanford has revealed that the impact of stress can be found deep within us, shrinking our brains, adding fat to our bellies, even unraveling our chromosomes. Stress is not just a state of mind, but something measurable and dangerous. Yet understanding how stress works can help us figure out a ways to combat it and how to live a life free of the tyranny of this contemporary plague. Narrated by Marcus Lovett. School : The Story of American Public Education Series - Impressive gains in the America's public schools by the 1950's appeared to offer great promise to the new, postwar generation of students, over half of whom would graduate and go on to college. Still American's public schools were reflective of the profound inequalities of American society as a whole. Seventeen states had segregated schools, "separate but equal" was still the law of the land, and only 1% of all Ph.D.s went to women. The episode brings to life the issues that prompted such milestones as Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka (1954), the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, Title IX, and the Americans with Disabilities Act. Linda Brown Thompson and other equal rights pioneers are interviewed. This is the third episode of a four part documentary series on the history of public education in the United States. There is an obesity epidemic in the United States and filmmaker Morgan Spurlock's film puts a spotlight on one of major causes, the fast food diet. A man in good health and go shape, proven by a battery of tests in the film, Spurlock devises an experiment, which calls for him to eat a "McDonald's only" diet for thirty days straight. He will eat only at McDonald's fast food restaurants for all meals, but will only "super size" his meals, a promotional tool of the chain, when offered the option by counter people. The film captures the effects on his body by his diet, the negative effects of his food intake go beyond the mere weight gain he expected, also his health changes so drastic that his doctors strongly recommended he stop his experiment before the thirty days are over. The film also touches on topics of corporate responsibility, nutritional education, school lunch programs, and how as a nation we are eating ourselves to death. Directed by Morgan Spurlock. COLOR 90 MIN PBS HOME V 2006
Frontline Series - An episode of the Frontline television series which originally aired on April 11, 2006. On June 5, 1989, one day after Chinese troops expelled thousands of demonstrators from Tiananmen Square, a solitary, unarmed protestor stood his ground before a column of tanks advancing down the Avenue of Eternal Peace. Captured by Western photographers, this extraordinary confrontation became an icon of the fight for freedom around the world. This film by Antony Thomas investigates the identity, fate, and significance of the tank man. The search for the tank man reveals China’s startling social compact - its embrace of capitalism while dissent is squashed - designed to stifle the nationwide unrest of 1989. Written and directed by Antony Thomas. This DVD version features widescreen presentation; English closed captioned for the deaf and hearing impaired.

First came Hollywood, then Bollywood and now Nollywood, Nigeria’s booming film industry, which released 2000 features in 2007 alone. Where else can you shoot a full-length dramatic film for $10,000 in 7 days? This is Nollywood explains why Nigerian video production is becoming recognized as a phenomenon with broad implications for the cultural and economic development of Africa. The center of the Nigerian film industry is Lagos, a chaotic, sprawling metropolis of 15,000,000 people. Nollywood is a $250,000,000 a year industry with returns to the producers often seven to ten times the production costs. The industry is wholly self-sustaining, receiving no foreign or government assistance and reaching their intended audience of the average Nigerian not international film festivals. There are an amazing 55,000,000 video players in Nigeria reaching 90% of the population. Thi si Nollywood follows a typical shoot from first day to last, while the director, producer, actors, crew members and notables from the industry, tell us how it all works, why they do it and why they believe locally produced media is essential to Africa. New York Times columnist Thomas L. Friedman leads an exploration of Muslim attitudes towards America. His reporting covers the contradictory feelings so many Muslims have towards America: deep admiration for its freedom and standard of living, combined with profound anger at what they see as its arrogant behavior in their part of the world. Friedman goes to Indonesia and Qatar, and listens to Muslim students voice their anger towards America, but also express an eagerness to get visas to study in the U.S. He travels to Cairo and the neighborhood that produced Mohammad Atta, leader of the 9/11 attacks and debates a radical Palestinian on the set of Al Jazeera television.

- Thomas Sankara: the upstart man: (DVD)
- A biography of Thomas Sankara, a charismatic army captain who became the first president of Burkina Faso after a popularly-supported coup. During his four years in office before being assassinated, he instituted a wide range of progressive social and economic reforms. As Africa looks desperately for leaders of integrity and vision, the life and ideas of Thomas Sankara seem more and more relevant and exemplary with the passage of time. This film should go a long way towards explaining why Sankara is still venerated in his own country as a legendary martyr like Patrice Lumumba or Amilcar Cabral. The film recovers for the present a detailed history of Sankara's brief four-year rule and his revolutionary program for African self-reliance as a defiant alternative to the neo-liberal development strategies imposed on Africa by the West, both then and today. Sankara came to power in 1983 in a popularly supported coup. He immediately launched the most ambitious program for social and economic change ever attempted on the African continent. To symbolize this rebirth, he even renamed his country from the French colonial Upper Colta to Burkina Faso, 'Land of Upright People.' Among other things, he immediately reduced the salaries of all public servants, advanced women's rights, launched wide scale vaccination, development and environmental campaigns. But while celebrating Sankara's achievements, this film does not ignore his authoritarian flaws. Sankara also challenged foreign power of the West to the dismay of his mutual interests, especially by the French. Decades before talk of cancellation of Africa's debt became acceptable in world banking circles, Sankara called for a united front of African nations to repudiate their foreign debt. He argued that the poor and exploited did not have an obligation to repay money to the rich and exploiting America. The winter soldier; Languages: English, French. Threads of belonging: (DVD)

COLOR 90 MIN VIDEO DATA 2003

This film depicts the daily life of Layton House, a fictional therapeutic community, where doctors live with their schizophrenic patients. The characters and events of Layton House were drawn from writings of the anti-psychiatry movement, whose most famous proponent was R.D. Laing. In this film we see experimental therapies, power struggles, and the individual arcs of mental illness converge, as a community struggles to understand itself and determine its destiny. The director writes, ‘Threads of Belonging was made out of an interest in the alternatives to institutionalization offered by the therapeutic community. I also felt that the idealism and politicization of madness spawned by R.D. Laing and his circle were due for reconsideration. The film was shot in a documentary style with digital video, and combines staged reenactment (in this case, based on case histories) with improvisation. Both cast and crew lived together in the house where we filmed, and so the dynamics of a real community came to bear on the fictional one of Layton House. It is one of the film’s strategies to foreground the troubled relationship between the way actors perform ‘madness’ and the way real insanity can itself resemble a performance. Also, there is an inherent sadness in the suffering of the patients and the failed idealism of this kind of intentional living. In preparation for the production of ‘Threads of Belonging’, patients were given sets of histories and background writing, and paired with their ‘doctors’ to develop their roles. Very few scenes were scripted. The film was both produced and acted by local artists and filmmakers in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Thus ‘Threads of Belonging’ is also an homage to the thriving, resilient community that I have found here.’ Cast includes Stephanie Barber, Lori Connerley, Bruce Stater, Jenny Bass, Dave O’Meara, Kelly Mink, Dave Andrae, Paul Druecke.

A group of Chilean women started a project as a way to get their voices heard and their stories told about the loved ones that were disappeared under Pinochet’s dictatorship. Using scraps of sewing needles, and a desire to find their loved ones the women created arpilleras - colorful hand made tapestries that chronicled the horror and injustice of Pinochet’s reign of terror. The arpilleras were smuggled out of Chile and sold, the money raised was then sent back to the Chilean arpilleras to help them support their families. The bright colored tapestries depict disturbing subjects and have become an international symbol of protest and hope. The actions of the arpilleras aided in bringing Democracy’s return to Chile. The film intercuts images of the atrocities committed during Pinochet’s rule with the arpilleras and the story of three arpilleras Doris Menicord, Violetta Morales, and Inelia Hermosilla, each of whom mourn for their disappeared family members. Tony Palmer's Britten at 100 : (DVD) 17932,ID
COLOR 240 MIN GONZO MULT 2012
A special collection of Tony Palmer films about Benjamin Britten and his music, released in advance of the composer's centenary in 2013. Disc one contains A Time There Was (1979) which was made at the request of Peter Pears. Appearing in the documentary are Janet Baker, Julian Pears, Richmond, Leonard Bernstein, Britten's brother and sisters, Pears himself and a host of the composer's close friends. Disc two: Benjamin Britten and his Festival (1967) was made to commemorate the opening of Snape Concert Hall and has not been seen for over 40 years. It offers a behind the scenes look at the Aldeburgh Festival and the opening by The Queen of the new concert hall at Snape. Disc three: The Burning Fiery Furnace (1967) is a film about the recording of the church parable in Orford Church, also made for the BBC in 1967, and also not seen for over 40 years. It is a major historic document as it provides the longest single piece of film of Britten working, with a cast including Peter Pears, John Shirley-Quirk and Robert Tear and instrumentalists hand-picked by the composer. Disc four: the opera Death in Venice (1981) made on location in Venice. After Britten's death, Peter Pears asked Palmer to make a film version of the opera if possible on location in Venice, the place which meant most to the composer other than his beloved Suffolk. From the original cast, John Shirley-Quirk and James Bowman were reassembled with an Australian tenor Robert Gard taking Pears's role of Aschenbach, and Stuart Bedford conducting the English Chamber Orchestra. Also includes 58 page booklet which includes Britten's famous but long out-of-print Aspen Award Speech. Directed by Tony Palmer. In English.

Cedric Page, an eccentric British inventor; Giulio, a mute athlete; and Fischer, a strongman, are recruited. In Greece, the gang hires corn man Arthur Simpson to drive a car over the border and meet them in Istanbul, but he is stopped by the Turkish police, who discover weapons hidden in the trunk. Major Tufan, one of the policemen, questions Simpson and then allows him to leave on the condition that he spy on the gang. At their villa headquarters, the gang plans the robbery: Fischer is to lower Giulio on a rope from a window near the museum's ceiling so that Giulio can steal the dagger while dangling above the sensitively wired floors of the museum. Geven, the drunken cook at the villa, believes the men are Russian spies and tells Simpson, who in turn passes the information on to Tufan. Later, Geven accidentally smashes Fischer's hands in a door, and Simpson is enlisted to take Fischer's place, although he has revealed his link to the police. The gang manages to elude Tufan, steal the dagger, and pass it to a Gypsy who will smuggle it out of Turkey. Flaunting their success, the gang goes to see Tufan, and Elizabeth explains that weapons were discovered in their car, while they are in the major's office, a bird flies through an open window in the museum and lands on the floor, triggering the alarm. The entire gang is arrested, but the undaunted Elizabeth begins outlining her plans for their next job—the theft of the Romanoff jewels from the Kremlin. Tough guise 2 : violence, manhood and American culture : (DVD)
18504.ID 12325,ID
COLOR 80 MIN MEDIA EDUC 2013
In this highly anticipated update of the influential and widely acclaimed Tough Guise, pioneering anti-violence educator and cultural theorist Jackson Katz argues that the ongoing epidemic of men's violence in America is rooted in our inability as a society to move beyond outdated ideals of manhood. In a sweeping analysis that cuts across racial, ethnic, and class lines, Katz examines mass shootings, day-to-day gun violence, violence against women, bullying, gay-bashing, and American militarism against the backdrop of a culture that has normalized violent and regressive forms of masculinity in the face of challenges to traditional male power and authority. Along the way, the film provides a stunning look at the violent, sexist, and homophobic messages boys and young men routinely receive from virtually every corner of the culture, from television, movies, video games, and advertising to pornography, the sports culture, and US political culture. Tough Guise 2 stands to empower a new generation of young men – and women – to challenge the myth that being a real man means putting up a false front and engaging in violent and self-destructive behavior. Directed and produced by Jeremy Earp. In English with optional English

An examination of the relationship between images of popular culture and the social construction of masculine identities in the U.S. at the dawn of the 21st century. Jackson Katz argues that the widespread violence in American society needs to be understood as part of an ongoing crisis in masculinity. This full version is in two parts: Part 1, understanding violent masculinity – that includes segments on "hidden: a gender;" "upping the ante;" "backlash;" and "the tough guise;" and Part 2, violent masculinity in action – with segments on "the school shootings;"
"constructing violent masculinity;" "sexualized violence;"
"invulnerability;" "vulnerability;" and "better men." Points are illustrated with examples from popular culture, from shock DJs and professional wrestling to country music and hip-hop videos.

A thirteen-year-old girl comes to live with her father. She had been living with her white mother back East, but her mother needs less responsibility in her life, so the girl has been sent to live with her Lebanese-born father in Houston, Texas. She is the pretty new “exotic” girl in the neighborhood and school, and she catches the attention of both boys and men. Her new circumstances coincide with an increased curiosity about sex. Her desire to experience more leads her into situations with an adult neighbor and a teen boy. She might not be as ready for the situations she finds herself in as she believes and when her father finds out he is enraged. The film is set during the first Gulf War in the early 1990s in a Texas suburb, her father is a proud American, but both he and his daughter experience anti-Arab sentiment that details how Big Tobacco skillfully convinced fire killers and others that cigarettes are safe for human consumption. Whether they are unhealthy for humans. A group of firefighters, journalists, physicians, scientists, political, and activists fight to expose a shadowy campaign of deception that led to a toxic legacy in our homes and bodies that has taken forty years to unravel. The documentary threads together an intricate story of exploitation that details how Big Tobacco skillfully convinced fire fighting professionals to back a standard that, in effect, requires all smokers to take more puffs to get the same amount of nicotine from a cigarette.

The trouble in Zolokere is a first person glimpse of the HIV/AIDS crisis in a tiny village in Malawi, Africa. The story is told through the eyes of filmmaker Cy Kuckenbaker who in May 2004 traveled to visit his friend, development worker Jake Wilson in the village of Zolokere. With only a few hours of tape, Cy had only planned to shoot a travelogue for himself and Jake during his month long stay. To his surprise a powerful story began to emerge about the culture that perpetuates the HIV/AIDS epidemic and the plight of women in Malawi. The final product is an introduction to women's issues in the region, a primer for understanding HIV/AIDS in Malawi and a glimpse of the difficult work Peace Corps volunteers face every day. In August 2012, twenty dance artists from eleven countries spent ten days at the Findhorn Community Foundation, Scotland, to learn and be coached in the performance of a solo they had each commissioned from renowned choreographer Deborah Hay. Hay's innovative Solo Performance Commissioning Project (SPCP) instils a transformative and rigorous daily practice that serves to stimulate and enrich each individual's approach to performance and choreography. This process then engenders twenty unique solo adaptations of the work through a period of practice that extends into the months following the project. To mark the moment of the final SPCP in 2012, Independent Dance commissioned videographer Becky Edmunds to document the journey of the group as they learned the solo ‘Dynamic’. The resulting film, Turn Your Fking Head, is the only time this project has been filmed. Capturing the process by which Hay transmits the same solo dance to twenty individuals, the film unveils the experiences, insights, and questions that inform the work and artistic practice. Edmunds reveals the discernment, humour, inquiry, and humility of one of the most respected and original dance artists of our time. A documentary by Becky Edmunds. The American Experience Series - The way the American public viewed the war in Vietnam was greatly impacted by events that transpired in October 1967. In a jungle in Vietnam an American battalion was ambushed by the Viet Cong and nearly wiped out, causing some leaders to question whether the war might not be winnable. On a college campus in Wisconsin, an anti-war demonstration turned violent, the first of the nationwide student protests to do so. The two events and stories of the people whose lives were irrevocably changed by the events are told, the words of The American and Viet Cong soldiers, relatives of men killed in battle, protesting students, police officers, university faculty and administrators, spokesmen of this most turbulent era in the history of the United States. Collectively, their words speak to the heartbeat caused by the war and the stark division it wrought on the home front. Based on the book "They Marched into Sunlight" by David Maraniss. A documentary on the events in Saskatoon regarding allegations of police abuse of power from the point of view of the Aboriginal families involved. The film chronicles the painful story of what came to be known as Saskatoon's infamous "freezing deaths", and the schism between a fearful, mistrustful Aboriginal community and a police force that must come to terms with a shocking secret. One frigid night in January 2000, a native man, Darrell Night, finds himself dumped by two police officers in -20 degree C temperatures in a barren field on the city outskirts and finds shelter at a nearby power station. He survives the ordeal but is stunned to hear that the frozen body of another Aboriginal man is discovered in the same area. Days later, another victim, also native, is found. When Night comes forward with his story, he sets in motion a chain of events: a major RCMP investigation into several suspicious deaths, the conviction of the two constables who abandoned him and the reopening of an old case, leading to a judicial inquiry. Narrated by Andrea Menard. Written and directed by Tasha Hubbard.

Uncle Moses : (Onkli Mozes) : (DVD) 13926,ID 13926,DM
B&W 83 MIN THE NATION 1932
According to contemporary reviewers, "Uncle Moses" follows closely the Yiddish Art Theater's adaptation of the 1918 Sholem Asch novel by the same name. Best known for his portrayals of the shetel, in "Uncle Moses" Asch shifts his focus from Eastern Europe to New York City's Lower East Side at the turn of the twentieth century. In vivid, sometimes comic, yet always soberly realistic images, the film portrays the lives of East European shetel Jews transplanted onto American soil. The bustling sweatshop and overcrowded tenement serve as the backdrop for a rich thematic blend of romantic intrigue, old and young love, realization of financial success, disintegration of the Jewish family, early struggles of the garment workers' union movement, and the clash of old-world values and new-world dreams. The pivotal role of Uncle Moses, benevolent despot and self-made patriarch among his landsmen, serves as an excellent vehicle for consummate actor Maurice Schwartz. While often flamboyant in his portrayal of this complex figure, Schwartz achieves a characterization of great dignity and compassion. Based on the novel by Sholem Asch. Cast includes Maurice Schwartz, Rubin Goldberg, Judith Abbronanell, Zvee Scooler, Mark Schweid, Sally Achor, Jacob Nestel, Rebecca Weintraub, Sam Gertler. Screenplay by Maurice Schwartz. Directed by Sidney Goldman and Aubrey Scott. Language: Yiddish; Subtitles: English.

Great courses Series - Professor Robert Greenberg, Chairman, Department of History and Literature, San Francisco
Performances presents sixteen forty-five minute lectures designed as a basic course on music theory. Music theory is the complex syntax of structural and instrumental resources that composers may draw on. For anyone wanting to master music's language, being able to read musical notation is a necessity, but as a basic course Professor Greenberg has developed this lecture series without the necessity to read music. Introducing music's language in a way that is similar to the way a native language is learned discovering and exploring musical syntax through listening learning what the parts of musical speech sound like, rather than what they look like on paper. The lectures represent an opportunity in musical education to experience a solid introduction to music theory's basics in a way that is not technically intimidating, yet provides a substantial grounding in the fundamentals. The course guide book includes professor biography, statement of course scope, lecture outlines and notes, glossary, biographical notes, and bibliography and is on file in the Instructional Media Collections and Services office in Powell Library room 270.

Shot over the course of a year in Northern Greenland, the film intrudes audiences to a remote village with more dogs than people. The film focuses on four townsfolk from the tiny population of 59: Lars, the only teenager; Karl, the huntsman who has never acknowledged that Lars is his son; Ilaangaq, the outsider who moved to Niaqornat after meeting his wife on-line; and Annie, the elder who remembers the ways of the Shaman and a time when the lights were fueled by seal blubber. In this astutely constructed real-life drama, we see how the economic and ecological future of the community is more fragile than its hardy inhabitants. Directed by Sarah Gavron and David Katsnelson. This DVD version features an interview with Sarah Gavron and David Katsnelson; Five deleted scenes: Hole firing, First day at school, Icebergs, Polar bear counting, The Tupi-lighter; Sarah Gavron short film Girl in the layby; UK trailer; Languages: Greenlandic, English, and Danish; Subtitles: English, Danish, French, and Spanish. Independent Lens Series - Versailles is an isolated community in eastern New Orleans that has been a destination for Vietnamese refugees since the late 1970's. The community reacted to the destruction of Hurricane Katrina with impressive determination, returning and rebuilding the area before many other New Orleans neighborhoods. When the community, already survivors of war and natural disaster was to be impacted again, this time by a government-imposed toxic landfill only two miles away from their homes, the impending threat to the communities health and wellbeing became a catalyst for change and a chance for a better future. Directed by S. Leo Chiang. This DVD version features three different length versions: 67 min. theatrical version with optional Vietnamese and English subtitles; 54 min. PBS/Educational version featuring English closed captioning for the deaf and hearing impaired and audio description for the visually impaired; 15 min. condensed version.

Looks at the legacy of the case of Vincent Chin, a young Chinese American man who was attacked and killed at his bachelor’s party at a suburban Detroit bar by current and former autoworkers who were unhappy with competition from Japanese auto manufacturers. The case attracted wide attention after Chin’s attackers struck a plea bargain and were sentenced to three thousand dollars in fines and three years in prison, that they never were required to serve after posting bail. Indignation by the Asian American community and others led to further charges being filed against the perpetrators. The film explores how the murder of Vincent Chin continues to have meaning to society today, as well as how the hate crime remains unknown or forgotten in many Americans’ minds. Featuring Tanzila Ahmed, Angelo Ancheta, Jay Chen, Curtis Chin, Judy Chu, Philip Chung, Ben De Guzman, Kelly Hu, Roland Hawkang, Lillian Ito, Jon Jang, Hamid Khan, Michelle Ko, Stewart Kwoh, Corky Lee, Eun Sook Lee, Marcia Lee, Lisa Ling, Dale Minami, Eric Nakamura, Yun-Sook, Kim Navarre, Angela Oh, Sejal Patel, Sumun Pendakur, Jim Shimoura, Renee Tajima-Pena, Doua Thor, Robin Tomo, Nhung Truong, Francis Wong, Frank Wu, Phil Yu, Helen Zia. Rare archival footage of life and work among Mississippi plantation workers in the 1930s. Mississippi cotton farming and sharecropping shot on 8mm without sound by a film amateur. Emma Knowlton, who was fascinated by the working lives of the black workers on the Perthshire estates. She called her film "Raisin' Cotton." The footage, shot in color and black and white, is a remarkable record of the work methods and changes in those methods on a cotton plantation at a transitional period in the cotton industry prior to World War II. The first segment of the film is narrated by Emma Knowlton Lytle who shot the footage. The second segment is the same footage narrated by Every Jackson and Eddie McClound, workers on the farm. Among those interviewed: Emma Knowlton Lytle, Mary Metcalf and Every Jackson [Perthshire plantation workers], Eddie McClound [Perthshire farmer], Lula Atkins Walker and Louise Powell. The footage evokes many memories from all of those seeing themselves, friends and family working in the cotton fields. Shot by Emma Knowlton Lytle. Narration by Emma Knowlton Lytle, Every Jackson, and Eddie McClound.

Inspired by the book "The long walk" by Slavomir Rawicz. In 1941 three men walked out of the Himalayas into India. They has survived a 4,000 mile walk to freedom. While there is disagreement on whether or not this is a true story, this film is a textbook example of the "man vs. Nature-red-in-tooth-and-claw" survival film. Janusz, a Polish prisoner of war, is forced to sign a false confession and shipped off to Siberia to rot in the most brutal prison system in the world--the Gulag. In prison, he meets a renowned Russian architect, an American architect, and a hardened Russian gangster. Janusz convinces six of his fellows to company him in an escape, which improbably succeeds, and then the real trial begins--a punishing race against the elements, time, hunger, and fear. Participants include Ed Harris, Jim Sturgess, Saoirse Ronan, Colin Farrell, Dragos Bucur, Alexandru Potocan, Gustaf Skarsgard, Sebastian Urzendowski, Mark Strong. Directed by Peter Weir. Special features: "The journey of the journey" (31 min.); Trailer (2 min.). In English with optional subtitles in English SDH or Spanish.

Terrordrome is a city of the future collapsing under pollution and set to explode with racial violence. Corrupt police lay down the law from armored cars and helicopters, while blacks are confined to a ghetto rampant with drugs and brutal gang feuds. Spike resides with his family and his pregnant white girlfriend, Jodie. When Spike's young nephew is killed in a police raid, the boy's anguish and mourning is mirrored on a vengeful shooting spree. Sides are drawn, black against white, and Spike's homeboys force him to choose between his lover and his race. A surreal depiction of an ultra-violent future society in which both those of African and European descent must live with their demons magnified by repression. The film starts with a recreation of "Ibo landing" in West Africa, where a group of slaves walked into the ocean and drowned in solidarity with one who had been brutalized. This documentary explores the burgeoning economic relationship between China and Zambia. The modern scramble for Africas resources and markets and Chinas determined expansion into Africa illustrate Chinas global roll as the new economic superpower. The film investigates the impact of international trade agreements on ordinary people. A historic gathering of over fifty African heads of state in Beijing reverberates in Zambia where the lives of three characters unfold. Mr. Liu is one of thousands of Chinese entrepreneurs who have settled across the continent in search of new opportunities. He has just bought his fourth farm and business is booming. In northern Zambia, Mr. Li, a project manager for a multinational Chinese company, is upgrading Zambia's longest road. Pressure to complete the road on time intensifies when funds from the Zambian government start running out. Meanwhile Zambia's Trade Minister is on route to China to secure millions of dollars of investment. Through the intimate portrayal of these characters, the expanding footprint of a rising global power is laid bare—pointing to a radically different future, not just for Africa, but also for the world. Covers the years 1913-1955 in a small German town. Hans Bockel and Bruno Tiches begin as schoolmates who both live through the end of the Kaiser's Germany, the Weimar republic, National Socialism and the post-war decade leading to the years of the German economic miracle. While the nimble opportunist Tiches always comes to a profitable arrangement with the powerful, Bockel the journalist remains an upright idealist who always chooses the path of integrity but remains unsuccessful. But one day the journalist has had enough, and in his newspaper attacks the former supreme Nazi and major industrialist Tiches hard. Naturally, his article is not without its consequences; Bockel becomes infuriated by this attack on his honor. He decides to go meet Hans in the editorial office and intimidate him. Doon School quintet Series - The day-to-day ups and downs of a schoolboy's life at one of India's foremost boarding school for boys, the Doon School in northern India. The film focuses on a group of twelve-year-olds during their first year in one of the "houses" for new boys, exploring the boys' attachment to the house but, more importantly, their attachment to one another in a communal life. It follows, in particular, the experiences of one boy and several of his close associates, from their initial homesickness, to their life as members of the group, to their separation from the house at the end of the year. Doon school was established by a group of Indian nationalists in the 1930s to produce a new generation of leaders who would guide the nation after Independence. Since then it has become highly influential in the creation of the new Indian elites and has come to epitomize many aspects of Indian postcoloniality. The school is sometimes called "the Eton of India," Doon School has nevertheless developed its own characteristic style and presents a curious mixture of privilege and egalitarianism. This film continues David MacDougall's long-term study of the Doon School, a five-part study of childhood and adolescence at the school. The school is India's foremost boarding school for boys, and the series provides unique insights into the values and training of the Indian middle class in particular and postcolonial elites more generally. A film by David MacDougall. This DVD version features menus; Chapter selection; English language with occasional conversations in Hindi; English closed captioned for the deaf and hearing impaired.

"The Woman, the orphan, and the tiger" is the third film in a trilogy of narrative experimental films dealing with international adoption and the ideological, geopolitical, historical, and psychological effects of that process. This film looks at the legacy of international adoption from a feminist perspective and within a transgenerational and transnational scope. It explores the ways in which trauma is passed on from previous generations to the present through a sense of being haunted and points to the politics involved in search. The film attempts to situate international adoption within a longer history of military and patriarchal violence against women and children in the aftermath of Japanese colonialism, the Cold War, and the emergence of U.S. imperialism. Zhang Hui has a crush on her fellow classmate, Xiao Gong. However, family pressure to succeed forces him to focus more on his studies rather than relationships, delegating Zhang Hui to the role of “just-friends”. But Zhang Hui doesn’t give up that easily. After graduation she finds work in Shanghai in order to stay close to Xiao Gong. Matters are complicated, however, when Xiao Gong returns from a business trip to Taiwan with a new girlfriend, BEI BEI. Unable to admit defeat, Zhang Hui seeks the help from a college classmate and her group of friends that have mastered the art of flirting. Overnight, Zhang Hui’s appearance, demeanor, and skills of seduction improve dramatically. As Xiao Gong begins to take notice, their relationship begins to progress beyond being “just-friends.” Never one to back down from a challenge, Bei Bei must plan a counter-offensive in order to maintain her girlfriend-status. COLOR 54 MIN NEW DAY FI 2012

A nuanced critique of gender and heroism in popular culture as well as a powerful dose of Vitamin F(eminism) for the underprivileged. From the birth of the 1940s comic book heroine, Wonder Woman, to the blockbuster retellings of today, Wonder Woman! looks at how popular representations of powerful women often reflect society’s anxieties about strong and healthy women. Wonder Woman! reveals the complicated negotiations girls and women face as they attempt to achieve confidence, strength, and agency in a society often at odds with those goals. Yet it also inspires through its evocative images, upbeat soundtrack, and richly contextualized history of American superheroes – including the everyday woman who can act hero in our midst. The film goes behind the scenes with Lynda Carter, Lindsay Wagner, comic writers and artists, and real-life superheroes such as Gloria Steinem, Kathleen Hanna, and others who offer an enlightening and entertaining counterpoint to the male-dominated superhero genre. Featuring Lynda Carter, Gloria Steinem, Lindsay Wagner, Kathleen Hanna, Jane Espenson. Directed by Kristy Guevara-Flanagan. This DVD version features both the uncensored and censored versions of the film; Video artist Darin Birnbaum; The Bechdel test; Women in exploitation & slashers film; Comic artist George Perez; Writer Jane Espenson on Buffy the vampire slayer; The female hero in Asian cinema; Streb extreme action dance company; Director's statement; PDF curriculum guides for downloading.

COLOR 35 MIN BERKELEY M 1997
Cross-cultural communication can be successful if we manage to understand the powerful differences that separate people who come from differing cultures. 14 key facets of cross-cultural miscommunication are examined. In each case, the power and subtlety of cultural differences are explored and illustrated. Culture can be like a veil that prevents us from understanding those from other societies, and also prevents them from understanding us. While some aspects of “culture shock” are predictable, such as language differences, many key differences are less obvious, and perhaps therefore even more “culture shocking.” Examples include dramatic differences in personal space, patterns of touching, etiquette and ritual, the expression of emotions, ideas of edible and delicious food, gestures, courtship patterns, and parent-child relationships. Presented by Dane Archer. Directed by Jon Silver.

The Criterion Collection Series - Austere, elegant, and fiercely Japanese, "Patriotism" uses Noh staging to tell the story of Lieutenant Takeyama and his new bride, Reiko. A planned coup d'etat has failed, and Takeyama will be required to participate in the execution of his friends. He therefore resolves to commit seppuku—suicide—accompanied by his wife. Elegant, expressionist and wordless, accompanied by selections from Wagners "Tristan und Isolde," Mishima emphasizes the erotic and romantic ties between husband and wife, the physical relationship beyond sex and death, the ability of duty and honor to give meaning to action, and the ability of action to grant power to ideas. In keeping with the motto that decorates their home, the final actions of Takeyama and Reiko are "wholeheartedly sincere." Cast includes Mishima Yukio, Tsuruoka Yoshiko. Written and directed by Yukio Mishima. This Criterion collection DVD version features both the Japanese version (27 min.) and the English version (29 min.); 49-minute audio recording of Yukio Mishima at The Foreign Correspondents Club of Japan; 50-minute making-of documentary, featuring crew from the films production; Interview excerpts featuring Mishima discussing World War II and death; Booklet featuring a new essay by renowned critic and historian Tony Rayns, Mishima's extensive notes on the films production, and Mishima's original short story; Language: Japanese and English intertitles.
